Penelope, my beloved daughter,

If you are reading this letter, then I have not returned from the battle. Daughter, though you may feel sad, know that I died an honourable death defending my Queen and country.

Your uncle, the Duke, will support you in financial and legal matters, but with your dear mother gone, you are now the head of the family. Despite your youth, you must make every effort to live up to your new responsibilities. Your sisters will now ¹ _____ up to you, as you once did to your mother. ² _____ after them as they ³ _____ up. They ⁴ _____ on you for support and guidance. Ensure they do not ⁵ _____ up with the wrong kind of men when that time comes! As the eldest, it is your responsibility to be patient, protective and forgiving with your sisters and to make sure you care for each other and ⁶ _____ on together as loving siblings.

It saddens my heart to leave you all, but know that I go to your mother and that I trust you, Penelope, completely.

With all my love.

Your father,
Lord Mason of Lowefell

WISE WORDS

A Every nation has its own proverbs which are repeated across the generations in order to pass on advice about the basic truths of life. In Germany, it is said that 'a country can be judged by the quality of its proverbs', while an Arabic saying suggests that 'a proverb is to speech what salt is to food'. In my view, a well-chosen proverb used at the right time can flavour a person's communication with wit and wisdom, but, to continue the Arabs' dinner-table analogy, it is important not to 'over-season' the meal. Speech or writing peppered with proverbs soon begins to sound patronising and contrived. Proverbs are a truly global phenomenon and, while their exact origins may not always be easy to pinpoint, by their very nature they transcend geographical, religious and cultural differences by focusing on broad topics such as family matters, friendship and affairs of the heart. Thus a proverb which has its roots in Asian culture may still convey a relevant wisdom for someone from a completely different corner of the world.

B Regardless of our nationality, most of us are similar in appearance or behaviour to one or both of our parents. Despite our protestations, my father and I are consistently told by those who know the family that the older I get, the more like him I become. 'What a load of rubbish!' say Dad and I in unison, with perfectly matched dismissive gestures and identical looks of scorn. As appears to be the case for me, the combined influences of our genes and our upbringing mean that often 'the apple doesn't fall far from the tree'. Here, the tree symbolises the parents and the fruit their offspring. Probably of Turkish origins, this saying has its western equivalents in 'like father, like son' or 'like mother, like daughter'. Similarly, a child who resembles one or the other of his or her parents, or indeed exhibits similarities of character is often described as being 'a chip off the old block'. Though bitter personal experience may lead significant numbers of us to doubt the assertion, it is nevertheless widely believed that no bond is stronger than the one that exists between family members. In Africa, people say that 'a family tie is like a tree: it can bend but it cannot break'. Similarly, the proverb 'blood is thicker than water', which is thought to have originated in Germany, places family above all others, including close friends. Even the importance of our four-legged friends as part of the family unit is not overlooked in Portugal, where 'a house without a dog or cat is the house of a scoundrel'. Excuse me, while I pop down to the pet shop.

C 'To be without a friend is to be poor indeed' according to a Tanzanian proverb. Of course, nothing comes for free in this world, and that includes friendship. German wisdom advises us that 'friendship is a plant we must often water' or, in other words, effort is required to maintain relationships and avoid finding ourselves friendless. A popular way to achieve this is through the sharing of food: 'warm food, warm friendships' suggest the Czechs. In the same way, an Arabian proverb assures us that 'so long as the pot is boiling, friendship will stay warm'. Conveniently then, whereas some might say I was simply too lazy to hit the gym three times a week as promised every New Year's Day for the last five years, I blame my ever-expanding waistline on my friends and the 'sacrifices' required to keep our relationships suitably warm. Maintaining friendships over the long term seems particularly important in Russia, where 'an old friend is much better than two new ones'. Perhaps this is because those who we have known for many years can usually be relied on to tell us the truth about ourselves, or as the Irish say, 'a friend's eye is a good mirror'. Should you need any further persuasion as to the importance of your mates, pals or buddies, then remember the Egyptian advice that 'friendship doubles joy and halves grief'.

D 'Love is blind', they say, which is of great comfort when you look like I do. The idea that love can 'blind' us to the negative in each other is recognised globally. In Germany, 'love sees roses without thorns' and for Chinese lovers 'even water is sweet'. Love-related proverbs also exist to remind us that we must accept our partners for what they are and try to love every aspect of them. In Africa, 'he who loves the vase loves also what is inside' and rather less poetically in the West we press our lovers to 'love me, love my dog'. Often stereotyped as romantics, the French say that 'real love is when you don't have to tell each other' and to this, the famously gastronomic nation adds that 'the torch of love is lit in the kitchen'. Wise words indeed, though based on personal experience, I can't be sure whether they are talking about love between two people or the love of one man for the contents of his fridge. When it comes to neighbourly love, the Chinese remind us that there are limits: 'love your neighbour, but don't pull down the fence'. Finally, returning to the natural world, the people of Burundi warn those who feel loved by their canine companions that 'dogs don't love people, they love the place where they are fed'.

Although the human experience varies greatly according to our geographical and cultural origins, it seems proverbial wisdoms almost always ring true no matter where they originate.

tie (n) = a strong connection or relationship between people, groups or nations scorn (n) = the feeling that someone or something is stupid and does not deserve respect scoundrel (n) = old-fashioned – a bad or dishonest person, usually male thorn (n) = a sharp point that grows on the stem of a plant canine (adj) = relating to dogs

1.7 Writing

A formal email/letter

1 Complete the advice. Some letters are given.

When writing to organisations or people you don't know, it is common to use formal style. To achieve a higher level of formality in your writing, consistently use ¹f forms rather than contractions and opt for single verbs rather than ²p verbs. In general, avoid ³c phrases and where possible use formal quantifiers and ⁴qs. Do not use ⁵s discourse markers such as well or actually but do aim to address the reader ⁶iy. Finally, always use ⁷ce sentences and never use question ⁸ts.

2 Match the examples to tips 1–8 in Exercise 1. Then rewrite them to make them more formal. There may be more than one way to do this.

- 1 We couldn't be more pleased that you've agreed to assist us. Tip

We could not be more pleased that you have agreed to assist us.

- 2 Event will start 9 a.m. and finish 4 p.m. Tip

- 3 We would be over the moon if you were able to join us for the day. Tip

- 4 Well anyway, we hope you will actually consider our request. Tip

- 5 We plan to go on holding these charity events as they bring in significant amounts of money. Tip

- 6 Would you be available to take part on the date specified? Tip

- 7 We understand you have been involved in such schemes in the past, haven't you? Tip

- 8 As the waterslide is kind of expensive to hire, we were hoping you could offer us a bit of a discount. Tip

3 Read the task and underline the information in points 1–4.

The Minister for Education in your country is planning to visit a school in your region to see a successful European student exchange programme in action and to speak to the students involved. You have been asked to write to the minister and invite him/her to visit your school, where a successful exchange programme has been in operation for a number of years. There are students from several European countries attending English classes and studying other subjects in English at your school. You should explain:

- why the minister should choose to visit your school and its exchange programme in particular.
- how both visiting and local students benefit from the exchange programme at your school.
- what the school and its students would gain from the minister's visit.

Write your letter in 220–260 words in an appropriate style.

- 1 Who you should write to.
 - 2 The purpose of the letter.
 - 3 Three main points the letter should address.
 - 4 The minimum number of words you should write.
- 4 Read the letter on page 13 and underline information relating to the three main points in the task in Exercise 3.
- 5 Complete the letter with the adjectives from the box.

current diverse entire grateful ideal substantial thrilled unique willing

REMEMBER THIS

In formal writing, conditional sentences with the inverted pattern should (instead of if) + subject + verb are common. Include examples in your letters and emails to increase the level of formality.

(If you should be willing) → Should you be willing to select our school, we would like to ...

(If you should wish) → Should you wish to contribute, please contact us ...

6 Match formal words and expressions in bold from the letter to the less formal items below.

- | | | |
|----|---|--------------------|
| | signed up for | enrolled in |
| 1 | think about | _____ |
| 2 | choose | _____ |

| 11 | show that we appreciate you being there | _____ |

SHOW WHAT YOU'VE LEARNT

7 Read the writing task. Then follow the instructions below.

A former student of your school has just won a gold medal while representing your country in the Olympic Games. Write a letter asking them to visit the school and give a talk to the students to inspire them to lead healthier lifestyles and become more involved in sport. You should:

- congratulate the sportsperson on their achievement and mention how proud the school is.
- explain how the students would benefit from a visit and a talk given by this sportsperson.
- outline how the visit would be organised and what efforts would be made to welcome the sportsperson.

Write your letter in 220-260 words in an appropriate style.

- 1 Identify the key parts of the writing task to focus on what the letter needs to cover.
- 2 Brainstorm ideas:
 - › What are you going to include in the first paragraph?
 - › Which ideas might you include in the main body?
 - › How are you going to conclude the letter?
- 3 Remember to use a formal style. Decide which words and phrases from this lesson and the lesson in the Student's Book could be useful for your letter.

Dear Minister,

My name is Marek Warwas and I am a student from Poland currently enrolled in the European exchange programme at King Bartholomew's Secondary School, in Newcastle. My classmates and I were thrilled to hear that you intend to visit our region and I am writing on everyone's behalf to explain why we feel our school would be the ¹ _____ choice for your visit.

The exchange programme at King Bartholomew's is ² _____ in the region due to the ³ _____ range of nationalities involved. Over the ten years it has been in existence, students from such ⁴ _____ European locations as Portugal, Latvia, Norway and Austria, to name but a few, have benefited from the opportunities presented by the programme. These opportunities include linguistic and social immersion, of course, but also regular events where exchange students present aspects of the culture of their countries to both local and visiting students. In this way, the ⁵ _____ school benefits from the programme.

Should you be ⁶ _____ to select our school, we would like to honour your presence on the day with a series of events including food-tasting, a concert and various sporting and cultural demonstrations organised and presented by our ⁷ _____ exchange students. We would also be extremely ⁸ _____ if you would consider giving us your thoughts on how we might recruit students from beyond Europe and thus work towards a truly international exchange in the future.

We look forward to your reply and hopefully to welcoming you at King Bartholomew's in the near future.

Yours faithfully,

Marek Warwas

Bird Brains • phrases with prepositions • collocations

BIRD BRAINS

In many cultures, crows have long been thought of in rather negative terms. These large black birds have been regarded as bad omens: dangerous and impure, bringers of bad luck or death. Even in the 21st century, for many the sight of their dark shapes and large, hammering beaks is as unwelcome as their ear-splitting cries, and few of us view them as more than unattractive pests.

1 ___

One example of such adaptability has been observed among communities of crows living in the urban environment of a Japanese city. There, they have found a way of reaching food that is normally inaccessible. The birds wait patiently at traffic lights for the oncoming traffic to stop at the red light for pedestrians. Next, they hop in front of the waiting cars and place walnuts gathered from nearby trees on the surface of the road. Just before the lights turn green, they fly away and, when the traffic begins to move again, the cars roll over the hard-shelled nuts and crack them open. Finally, once pedestrians regain the right of way, the crows return and collect their delicious snacks.

2 ___

In another revealing demonstration of avian intelligence, researchers found that rooks, members of the crow family, can use stones to raise the level of water in a container – just like the bird in the tale The Crow and the Pitcher. In the story, written thousands of years ago by the Ethiopian slave Aesop, a thirsty crow finds a pitcher, a deep jar for storing liquids, containing too little water for its beak to reach. The bird solves the problem by throwing pebbles, or small stones, into the pitcher one by one, until the water level rises high enough for it to drink.

To start with, the tasty treat was out of reach. Videos of the experiments show the birds examining the tube from different angles, appearing to think the problem through. Then the researchers provide a solution in the form of a handful of pebbles. The rooks can be seen picking up the stones and dropping them into the tube to raise the water level and bring the worm within reach. The birds appeared to estimate how many pebbles were needed from the start and, rather than try for the worm after each stone was dropped, they waited until the water level was high enough. They also selected larger stones over smaller ones, for greater effect.

4 ___

Rooks and crows both belong to the corvid family. According to Mr Bird, 'corvids are exceptionally intelligent, and in many ways rival the great apes in their physical intelligence and ability to solve problems. This is remarkable considering their brain is so different to the great apes.'

5 ___

'Wild tool use appears to be dependent on motivation,' said Mr Bird. 'Rooks do not use tools in the wild because they do not need to, not because they can't. They have access to other food that can be acquired without using tools.'

Corvids are by no means the only intelligent species of bird. Parrots too demonstrate amazing brain power. Known for their ability to 'talk', parrots were once thought only to mimic human words and phrases, but research on captive birds has shown that they are able to learn and use basic speech.

After tutoring, Alex, as he is known, has learned a vocabulary of over 100 words, which he appears to be able to use meaningfully. Even more impressively, Alex uses phrases such as 'no', 'come here' and 'I want X' in order to engage in what appears to be genuine communication.

The old saying 'bird brain', traditionally used to insult someone who does something stupid, would, it seems, perhaps be better used as a compliment for those who show intelligence.

avian (adj) = relating to birds dexterity (n) = skill and speed doing something with a part of your body; in humans, usually the hands pest (n) = a small animal or insect that destroys crops or food supplies, or annoys other animals or humans in some way captivity (n) = when an animal is kept in a cage or zoo rather than living in the wild estimate (v) = to try to judge the value, size, cost, etc. of something without measuring it exactly rival (v) = to be as good or important as something else mimic (v) = to copy the behaviour, look or sound of something else

1 Read the article without looking at the missing paragraphs. What is the main purpose of the text?

- 1 To highlight the intelligence of a particular species of bird.
- 2 To compare avian intelligence to that of other species of animals.
- 3 To report a new development in research into avian intelligence.

2 Read the article again. Complete gaps 1–6 with paragraphs A–G. There is one extra paragraph.

- A A similar challenge faced the rooks studied by the appropriately named Cambridge University zoologist, Christopher Bird. In a series of tests, the four rooks named Cook, Fry, Connelly and Monroe were offered a worm floating on the surface of water in a vertical tube.
- B Through the work of a professor at the University of Arizona, one such bird is now believed to have the intelligence and emotional make-up of a 3-4-year-old child.
- C Crows have been engaged in this remarkable behaviour since the 1990s and have since been observed doing something very similar in California. There, it is thought to be an adaptation of a method used for opening clams. The crows were known to drop the tightly sealed shellfish from a height onto rocks on the seashore in order to crack them and get at the nutritious flesh hidden inside.
- D Corvids can tell human beings apart by their voices and recognise people who have fed them. They are also alarmed by the sound of those they have never seen before. Most intriguingly, the scientists speculate that they may be clever enough to cooperate with other bird species.
- E Research, however, suggests that the common view of the crow may be wrong. They might not be beautiful, but they are amongst the most intelligent creatures on the planet. For example, they have demonstrated a remarkable ability to change their behaviour according to their surroundings in order to make the most of opportunities presented.
- F The only animal believed to have done a similar fluid-mechanics task is the orang-utan, said Mr Bird, a PhD student. The orang-utans were reported to have brought a peanut within reach by spitting water into a tube.
- G One member of this incredibly bright species, the Caledonian crow, is renowned for its ability to make twig and leaf tools in the wild and adapt them with great dexterity to extract grubs and caterpillars. However, such behaviour has never been seen in rooks living outside captivity.

3 Find six more mistakes in the text, two in each paragraph, by adding or crossing out a/an.

Most English schools introduced ^a ban on mobile phones during classes a long time ago and now they have conclusive proof that they were right. According to the latest study, not giving students an access to their phones translates into extra week's education in a school year. Researchers also observed that test results in such schools went up by over 6 percent.

The research was conducted at several British schools before and after bans were introduced. 'While it's true that a modern technology used in the classroom engages students and improves a performance, there are also potential obstacles, as it could lead to distractions,' the researchers say.

The findings will definitely provide powerful arguments in the ongoing debate about pupils' access to mobile phones. In the UK, staggering 90 percent of teenagers own smartphone; in the US, almost 75 percent.

4 Read some comments on the article in Exercise 3 and choose the best option.

Why ban phones? Teachers should teach our children phone etiquette instead. They should be taught from ¹ \emptyset / a / an early age about responsible use.

2.7 Writing

An article

1 Read the article and choose the most suitable title.

- 1 Use it or lose it: How to educate a gifted child.
- 2 Teaching everyone: How to divide attention in the classroom.
- 3 Special needs: Why gifted pupils need attention too.

Schools and colleges around the world quite rightly devote a great deal of time and effort to helping children and young adults who are deemed to have special educational needs. Nine times out of ten, this effort is focused on those who are struggling to reach a minimum standard and therefore falling behind with their education. However, is it not the case that if you are gifted, you also have distinct educational requirements and just as much right to individual attention in the classroom? Let's consider both sides of the debate.

'The cream always rises to the top', they say, and so it is often assumed that bright children will excel at whatever they take on. Don't consistently good grades at school amount to proof of the satisfactory academic progress of those who achieve them? If so, then surely teachers are justified in their decision to concentrate on those who are lagging behind. Add to this the claim that labelling certain children as 'gifted' sends an unproductive message to those who don't measure up, and there is really nothing left to debate, is there?

Not so fast. Gifted children need attention too! Exceptional pupils should face rigorous challenges at school if they are to remain engaged and realise their full potential. Without such challenges to rise to, these pupils soon become bored and then distracted. It is a tall order for them to thrive if they are constantly asked to twiddle their thumbs while their peers catch up. According to US researchers, by not stretching the brightest of their students 'teachers could be squandering the talent of the most creative minds of a generation'.

Clearly, there is a case for attending more closely to the needs of top pupils, as well as helping those who are struggling to make the grade. There will always be competition for teachers' attention and schools' resources and, in my opinion, every child is entitled to their fair share during the time they spend at school or college.

What education is needed nowadays?

It is said that schools should provide students with excellent education to help them in their career and life choices. But is that really the case?

School leavers emphasise how few subjects offer a practical experience and not just theory. They also feel that their timetables are filled with incredible number of uninspiring subjects rarely allowing them to have good night's sleep. It is obvious that students need a help, but does being given a lot of homework work? (4)

Both educationalists and students claim that there should be less focus on tests and more attention paid to a progress that students make in the course of education. (1)

Why I prefer teaching myself

Although I'm only 16, I'm perfectly capable of B my own decisions. I also love doing things on my own and rarely get ¹ by difficulties I come across. I can be a case in ² for all of those who would prefer to go for home schooling rather than formal education.

Everyone has their preferred learning style and I learn more efficiently when I choose what I do rather than when I'm faced ³ tasks imposed on me. I go at my own speed, taking everything in my ⁴. I don't feel isolated, because the goals I set with the help of others are chosen with my ultimate ambitions in mind – like what qualifications I might need for the career I want. Another important point is revision and preparation for exams. I avoid just ⁵ for exams. The key point is having a good understanding of the subject. If I don't understand something, I look it up – there's no shortage of options around.

I often do more than strictly necessary because I'm self-motivated, and I rarely get frazzled because I can ⁶ things in perspective. I'm deeply convinced that thinking for myself is worth my ⁷ because I tend to sail through exams thanks to it and my increased knowledge. Obviously, some might think it's easier to stay in their comfort ⁸ and be spoon-fed, but the extra effort involved in self-teaching has given me a will to succeed.

Chapter 1 – The Early Years

My love of food and ultimately my career as a restaurateur has its roots in my childhood. My parents ran a small but successful Italian eatery named 'Capaldi's' in the East Village district of Manhattan, New York. We lived in a minuscule apartment perched over the business and our single shared bedroom nestled directly above the bustling dining room. Oddly, it is the myriad sounds rather than the smells which remain with me most vividly some 50 years later. I recall lying alone in bed listening to the buzzy conversations of the evening's gathered diners. This comforting constant was punctuated by the occasional ¹ _____ of wine bottles being opened by Miguel, our long-serving Mexican waiter, and the ensuing ² _____ of glasses as the customers drank toasts to whatever they were celebrating that day. The sudden ³ _____ of steaks hitting the grill in the kitchen would rouse me when I had almost drifted away and then, during the summer months, the ⁴ _____ of the ancient air-conditioning system would draw me irresistibly back into the arms of Morpheus. Winters were marked by the ⁵ _____ of the customers' footsteps on the icy pavement outside as they arrived red-cheeked and empty-bellied, or left rounded and glowing with well-fed satisfaction.

Bitter sweet facts • phrases • collocations

Sweet, sweet sugar: the bitter truth

Initiated by an American doctor named Robert Lustig, there have recently been calls in the US for laws to restrict sugar as if it were alcohol or tobacco. The more sceptical among us might question whether this isn't just another case of food-related scaremongering. Obviously, tobacco and alcohol are toxic and costly for everyone, and both are extremely addictive and have been proven to cause an array of diseases. But sugar?

OK, we know it rots your teeth if you don't clean them after eating it. Sure, if you eat too much sugar, you put on weight. Admittedly, it can alter your metabolism, so when you eat sugar, you crave more. And, well, yes there is the 'sugar-high' that anyone who has spent time around 'kids on cola' will certainly acknowledge. But, honestly, sugar is harmless enough, isn't it? Or perhaps it's more accurate to say that most of us are happier not to acknowledge the bitter truth about our apparently sweet friend.

Dr. Lustig is a professor of clinical paediatrics at the University of California, San Francisco, and a respected expert on childhood obesity. His area of expertise is human metabolism – how our bodies break down food and turn it into energy. Some of his lectures are on YouTube and several of them have gone viral. This middle-aged, grey-haired, slightly stocky doctor, who wears a suit and tie and talks about the metabolism of fructose, has, in fact, had more than two million hits.

According to Lustig, there are now 30 per cent more obese people in the world than undernourished people. It is tempting to think that this obesity epidemic and its associated metabolic problems are the result of people eating too much fat, but this, Lustig argues, is not the case. In the seventies, he explains, the medical establishment believed it had discovered a link between dietary fat and heart attacks, and in response, the entire western world went low-fat. The problem, Lustig tells us, is that 'when you take the fat out, it tastes like cardboard'. The food industry had to do something. What did they do? They added high-fructose corn syrup and sucrose, or in other words sugar. So about 35 years ago, the developed world turned its diet upside-down. We stripped away fat, and added sugar; 'invisible' sugar sneaked into everything from steak pie to smoked salmon.

What happens in your liver when you eat too much of this 'invisible' sugar? Well, there's a complicated chain of events, but the upshot is something called 'leptin resistance'. Leptin is a hormone produced to tell us when we're full. When we eat too much fructose, leptin is sometimes switched off and we lose the ability to tell when we've consumed as much as we need. Interestingly, Lustig offers a hypothesis as to why this happens. He says it might be because there was a time of year, harvest time, when ancestral humans had an abundance of fruit, followed by a time of year, winter, when they had almost nothing. In crude terms, we evolved to stuff our faces at harvest time. Fructose makes us want to eat more; it tells us not to be satisfied. That was good, then, when food was scarce, but it's a disaster now, when it's everywhere. Lustig believes this is why so many people are 'off-the-scale' fat these days.

So should sugar consumption be regulated by law? For a substance to be controlled, it must have four characteristics. It must have the potential to be abused, it must be toxic, it must be widespread and it must cause problems for people other than those who abuse it. Sugar, it seems, ticks all these boxes and that's why Lustig thinks it should be ranked alongside alcohol and tobacco. Sugar is everywhere. It's addictive, it's toxic, and, in the end, we all have to pay for it, if not with our health, then at least in our taxes.

There is, of course, a big barrier to any effort to regulate sugar consumption, namely the food industry. 'The food industry,' Lustig believes, 'has no impetus to change. They're making money hand over fist.' We've all heard of 'Big Tobacco' and the collective influence of cigarette producers that somehow allows them to continue selling a product that has been proven to kill both users and non-users. Well, it seems there's something even bigger to worry about: 'Big Sugar'. The obesity expert Philip James puts it this way: 'The sugar industry has learnt the tricks of the tobacco industry. Confuse the public. Produce experts who disagree. Try to dilute the message.' Lustig has been accused of irresponsible fear mongering.

What if Lustig is right? What if sugar is the culprit? What can we do? We can start the long, laborious process of coming out of denial. We're doing it with alcohol. We've done it with tobacco, which was a huge struggle. But it's working. Many people used to smoke. Now most people don't. We made it expensive, harder to buy, and harder to advertise. We kept it away from children. We made it taboo. Can we do this with sugar? Well, perhaps, but sugar is a tougher opponent than tobacco. Tobacco was only found in cigarettes, cigars and pipes whereas sugar is everywhere. It's in the sausages, it's in the beans and it's in the toast. To radically cut our intake would be to radically shake up the economy.

scaremongering/fear mongering (n) = the practice of deliberately making people worried or nervous, especially in order to get an advantage array (n) = a large or impressive group of people or things crave (v) = if you crave something (e.g. fame, a cigarette, attention), you desire it strongly stocky (adj) = short and muscular the upshot (of sth) (n) = the final result of a situation abundance (n) = a large quantity of something scarce (adj) = not widely available; hard to find impetus (n) = an influence that makes something happen culprit (n) = the thing or person to blame laborious (adj) = requiring a lot of time and effort

 A increase calories.
 B reduce heart attack risk.
 C improve flavour.
 D tackle diabetes.
- 4 In paragraph 4 Lustig says he believes a common cause of obesity these days is
 A the insufficient amount of fruit in the modern diet.
 B the overproduction of a certain hormone in the liver.
 C the easy availability of food in modern society.
 D the overconsumption of certain foods at specific times of the year.
- 5 Phillip James suggests that the sugar industry
 A has copied the tactics of the tobacco industry.
 B is less of a problem than the tobacco industry.
 C has lied about the harmful nature of its products.
 D acknowledges some of Lustig's claims.
- 6 What is the writer's opinion on the chances of a reduction in sugar consumption in the future?
 A It would pose a greater challenge than the reduction of alcohol consumption.
 B If tobacco consumption can be reduced, then so can sugar consumption.
 C It would be economically impossible to reduce it enough to be effective.
 D Even acknowledgement of its harmful effects may not lead to a reduction in consumption.

RISKY FISH ROULETTE

Five men from Osaka, Japan, got together at a restaurant last Friday to celebrate their promotion at work. Unfortunately, their celebration was brought to an abrupt end when they got poisoned after dining on a very expensive delicacy: toxic fish called fugu (puffer fish in English). Although the chef allegedly asked them to think their decision ¹____, the men insisted on being served banned parts of fugu. 'The customer is always right,' as the saying goes, so the waiter meekly handed ²____ plates with puffer fish liver. When the gourmets started vomiting and having breathing difficulties, the restaurant staff called an ambulance.

Apart from being very expensive (the sales of fugu dishes bring ³____ $200 a piece), it is also one of the world's deadliest fish.

The Japanese government has wanted to cut ⁴____ puffer fish completely from menus for years, but so far without success. The authorities struggle ⁵____ but fortunately have managed to put ⁶____ a bill that heavily regulates the delicacy, i.e. chefs who want to serve it are required to train for two years before taking a very demanding test. According to a city health official, the restaurant in question took on a chef with a fugu-preparing licence earlier this month and he knew he was supposed to take ⁷____ the banned parts before serving the dish. It is unclear, why he agreed to serve the customers regardless. The restaurant owner claims it will carry ⁸____ serving fugu, but the police have closed down the place for investigation.

3.7 Writing

A proposal

1 Complete the advice using the words from the box. There are three extra words.

assist break convince course distinct entire formal logically ~~primary~~ show

The primary goal of a proposal is to ¹_____ the reader to follow the ²_____ of action you recommend. You should write in a reasonably ³_____, impersonal style. To ⁴_____ you in presenting the information clearly, divide the proposal into ⁵_____ parts using appropriate headings. In addition to these headings, remember to give the ⁶_____ proposal a neutral title.

2 Read the notice from a school's website and then the introduction to the proposal. Tick the problem the student has chosen to address.

A large amount of money was recently donated to the school by a former student with the provision that it is used to address a problem and improve the school for all the students. It has been decided that the money will be spent on developing the unused land next to the car park. The following relevant problems have been identified by the student council:

Students would like to learn more about how to grow plants for food, but there are no facilities.

There is a lack of natural habitat for local wildlife in the vicinity of the school.

The school relies on fossil fuels but would like to explore how renewable energy might be used instead.

Students are encouraged to cycle to school, yet there is nowhere secure for them to store their bikes.

Please submit proposals analysing one of these problems and suggesting how the money might be used to develop the land in order to provide a solution.

3 Read the whole proposal and put the following stages in order.

- Include a neutral title.
- State your recommendations and give reasons and justifications.
- Present the current situation.
- Strongly suggest that the reader takes the recommended action.
- State the aim of the proposal.
- Provide any information needed to explain why you are going to recommend changes.
- Introduce the issue and say why it is important.
- Summarise the benefits of your recommendations.

Proposal for investment in school land

Introduction

Green areas are few and far between nowadays, yet they are integral to the well-being of all living things. The ¹*reason / purpose* of this proposal is to discuss the lack of such space near our school and ²*recommend / ask* how we could use the recent generous donation to address this.

Current situation

The last two years have witnessed the sad disappearance of the natural habitat that once surrounded the school. First, land was sold to housing developers, next the car park was extended, and most recently, a new bus terminus was built at the top of the school drive. All this development took place on formerly green land, and has resulted in drab views from the classrooms and the virtual eradication of wildlife from the area.

Recommendations

In ³*conclusion / response*, I suggest the development of a small nature reserve on the unused land. This would encourage local wildlife back to the area, providing a more pleasant environment and the potential for scientific study. Students could be involved in the establishment of the reserve by planting trees and building and erecting nest boxes for birds. Furthermore, I ⁴*encourage / propose* that a large pond is dug as part of the reserve so that a wider variety of flora and fauna can set up home. Pathways and benches could also be provided, which would mean staff and students could enjoy the space.

Conclusion

The ongoing nature of the project ⁵*means / results in* the investment will pay dividends long into the future and remind successive generations of students of the value of nature. In this world of concrete and glass, I ⁶*urge / hope* the school to invest in something more wholesome.

4 Choose the correct words to complete the proposal.

5 Underline examples of the following ways of expressing cause and effect in the text.

- Two linking phrases
- A comment clause to refer back to the whole main clause
- A participle clause to express the result of the main clause

6 Combine the pairs of sentences using the words in bold.

Many students have no experience of growing their own food. This means they have no idea how satisfying it can be. which

Many students have no experience of growing their own food, which means they have no idea how satisfying it can be.

1 The school relies entirely on fossil fuels. As a result, energy bills are high. resulting

2 The response to our 'Cycle to School' scheme was fantastic. This led to a huge increase in the number of bikes being brought to school. leading

3 I recommend the installation of solar panels on the unused land. In this way, the school can save money and students can learn about solar power. so that

4 I propose that the students build and maintain a kitchen garden on the unused land. As a result, they will feel closer to nature and gain a better appreciation of the value of fresh food. with the result that

5 Four bicycles have been stolen this month alone. This demonstrates how pressing the need for a secure bike park is. which

7 Complete the definitions with the correct forms of the words in bold in the proposal.

- 7 Read the text and think of the word which best fits each gap. Use only one word in each gap.

The cost of healthy eating

Visiting my local supermarket to stock up on highly expensive soy sausages, almond milk, coconut water, or any other food craze which has recently hit the media, it feels that healthy food is taking ¹ _____ our lives completely. The shelves are groaning with a huge variety of food products claiming to make us healthier, which surely ² _____ be a good thing.

Yet it has not always been like this. In recent years there has been a ³ _____ deal of concern about the amount of obesity, triggered by our high consumption of fat, salt and sugar. Ironically, it is now the turn of so-called 'healthy' food to come under attack for the impact it is having ⁴ _____ the environment.

Soy sausages, for example, may be responsible for causing even ⁵ _____ deforestation than real meat does. And the demand for almonds means that water is now running out in California. And so on! So as ⁶ _____ as costing us a lot of money, our search for new food can have a disastrous effect on the planet too.

There has been a recent consumer backlash against the poor quality speakers fitted as standard to most laptops and televisions. If you are looking to upgrade and happen to have $300,000 to spare, then perhaps the Goldmund Apologue Speaker System is for you. The ¹_____ of Goldmund, a company synonymous with the very highest end of audio-design for the last 30 years, these speakers are some of the finest money can buy.

Leaving the ²_____ trailing far, far behind, the Apologue system is ³_____ to provide the absolute pinnacle of sound quality. With such a price tag, these are clearly not intended for the ⁴_____ consumer but rather have their ⁵_____ among the bankers and rock stars that can afford such indulgences. The raw power of the speakers may leave neighbours wishing for ⁶_____ walls, although the fact is that those who can afford a pair probably don't have neighbours living anywhere close enough to be disturbed.

Four writers comment on digital data storage

A

If you want to make sure your treasured photographs are available for future generations to enjoy, then the safest option is not to back them up on your hard drive, or store them remotely in the cloud, but to print them out. Recent history has shown that, as technology advances, data storage formats such as audio cassettes, floppy disks or video tapes quickly become obsolete making the data they hold inaccessible. With this in mind, if we want to preserve our digital lives in the same way we preserve our history in books, we need to make sure that the digital objects we create will be available in centuries to come. One way to do this would be to create a system which will not only store a digital format but hold details of the software and operating system needed to access it, so it can be recreated in the future. Until such a system is in place, printing out your photos and sticking them in the family album remains your best option.

C

Cloud storage removes the need for portable data storage devices and therefore tackles the problem of ageing formats and hardware. However, as recent leaks of celebrities' private photographs have proved, the cloud may not be a safe place to store personal files. With certain settings, anything you do on your phone is uploaded to the cloud then pulled down by your other devices. Convenient? Yes, but the sacrifice required is compromised security because your data is actually sitting on a server in 'the cloud' on someone else's computer and is therefore vulnerable to hackers. There are, of course, ways of encrypting data or stopping it from being uploaded to the cloud but in my opinion, the most effective way of ensuring that sensitive information does not get into the wrong hands is not to record it on a cloud-based device in the first place.

B

Storing files remotely rather than on fragile discs or clunky hard drives certainly proves helpful for professional as well as home users. One of the biggest advantages of using cloud storage is that it helps to add another layer of protection for irreplaceable and precious files. Secure locations are chosen for the backups that are physically removed from originals. As a result, data kept within the cloud services remains absolutely safe and secure from all types of unauthorised use or access. However, there are potential pitfalls to storing your data in the cloud and, despite media scaremongering about security issues, perhaps the biggest downside is the likelihood of technical failure or connectivity issues rendering your files unavailable at just the moment you need to access them.

D

Research suggests that although some storage devices may last longer than a decade, others may stop working after little more than a year. For this reason, it is vital to regularly create and update copies of your most important data on different storage devices. Even then, considering the rapid evolution of data storage formats, there is no guarantee that your files and photos will be accessible even a few years from now. Cloud storage is being hailed as a solution, but science is looking to nature to find the best way to store data in a manner that will guarantee its availability far into the future. Researchers in Switzerland believe the answer may lie in the data storage system that exists in every living cell: DNA. Fossils prove that in the right conditions, strands of DNA can store data for close to a million years. Moreover, its strands are so compact and complex that just one gram of DNA is theoretically capable of containing all the data of Internet giants such as Google and Facebook, with room to spare.

PRIVACY CONCERNS

Google Glass is a device similar to a pair of eyeglasses (except it has only one glass) and uses voice control to allow the wearer ¹ access a wide range of functions. Its inbuilt camera ² users record images and video of anything and display it in front of their eyes. The display can show maps in order ³ provide the user with directions, present texts from other users, search the Internet – the list goes on. But while the device ⁴ to be the future of wearable technology, it has already managed ⁵ arouse controversy. First, it was only available in the US to a handful of the so-called 'Glass Explorers' for $1,500. A year later Google began to sell it ⁶ the public. However, on January 15, 2015, the company took a decision ⁷ stop producing the Google Glass prototype but did not abandon the product development. What caused them to ⁸ it? Because of concerns about secret filming and privacy, more and more places started warning people ⁹ to use the device on their premises. Cinema owners ¹⁰ cinemagoers hand in their devices before viewing a film and restaurant customers wearing Google Glass were reminded that everybody ought ¹¹ have the right to privacy when they eat out, ¹² name but a few.

All About Her

In his latest film Her, director Spike Jonze tries to make us believe that it may not be easy ¹ love in the future. Joaquin Phoenix plays the role of Theodore Twombly, an emotionally bruised man, whose job is ² beautiful personal letters for customers who choose ³ this themselves. Theodore is anxious ⁴ over a new leaf after he fails ⁵ his marriage to Catherine (Rooney Mara). But this time he opts for a highly advanced operating system so as ⁶ his old mistakes. The system's name is Samantha (voiced by Scarlett Johansson) and, strange as it may seem, she manages ⁷ Theodore with the things his marriage was lacking.

Her is a gentle satire on human as opposed to artificial intelligence. The viewer is eager ⁸ Theodore in his pursuit of happiness. Phoenix is joined on screen by Amy Adams, whose character, Amy, is Theodore's best friend. According to her, falling in love is a madness that everybody is willing ⁹ and she wonders why it should be any more insane ¹⁰ in love with an operating system than with a human being.

Whether the film was correct in its predictions on the nature of future relationships, remains ¹¹. In the meantime, be sure ¹² it at the cinema or on DVD. See for yourselves if Theodore was lucky ¹³ for an artificial intelligence.

TWEET LITERATURE

Some wring their hands saying that, ¹*arguably* / regrettably , classical literature is losing popularity among young people. ²*Indeed* / Incidentally , a new survey shows that a shocking 10 percent of young adults (those aged 18-25) have never read a book in their life (³*strikingly* / clearly , however, 75 percent of them, on average, check their mobile device 14 times a day). ⁴*Curiously* / Arguably it is because they prefer other forms of experiencing reading, namely social media. Not only do young adults read all kinds of text available online but, ⁵*interestingly* / luckily , more and more of them have a go at creating short stories themselves. Take tweet literature, for example. This latest social networking trend consists of creating narratives in 140 characters. Each story must have believable heroes and a compelling plot. It is ⁶*possibly* / plainly taking Twitter by storm because hashtags like #VeryShortStory are gaining a few thousand new fans every week. Instead of following celebrities' tweets about what they have for breakfast, those budding writers take to their smartphones to create succinct narratives. - 3 Read the review. Which type of consumer is Lily primarily aimed at?

- 1 Trainee drone pilots
2 Extreme sports fans
3 Professional photographers

- 4 Choose the correct words to complete the review.

Ditch your selfie-sticks: here comes Lily ...

No matter how long your selfie-stick is, there are some shots you are never going to capture. ¹Whether / If it's aerial views of the beach party or you and your crew carving powder on the mountains, a remote-control drone ²allows / offers you to shoot jaw-dropping footage to professional standards. The trouble is, keeping the drone and the camera pointing in the right direction while you catch a wave or bike down a trail, is all but impossible. Until now that is, and the arrival of Lily Camera.

Lily Camera is a self-flying device ³designed / enabled to follow a small circular tracker in your pocket or on your wrist. The ⁴excellent / outstanding feature is that you don't actually have to pilot Lily Camera yourself. With one tap of the tracker, it will follow your every move and execute some very nifty camera work, so that you and your mates can concentrate on avoiding that tree or landing that jump. The camera inside ⁵benefits / boasts mind-blowing 1080p video and some very astute tech that will detect when you hit a jump on your board or bike and automatically kick things into slow-mo. ⁶Not / It's only can Lily Camera fly at 25 miles per hour, but it is totally waterproof, lasts up to 20 minutes on a charge, and has a range of up to 100 feet.

⁷Others / Some may find Lily Camera's independence a drawback. This is not a product for those interested in actually piloting a drone themselves, but if it's ⁸ease of use / user-friendly and first-rate images you are looking for, then the device is peerless. Even the launch is spectacular. Throw it up in the air and sensors fire up the rotor blades so as to send the camera hovering above you to await further instructions.

The product is the ultimate ⁹choice / plus for capturing active folk's adventures in high-definition. ¹⁰Even / While Lily Camera might not be cheap, it certainly rises high above the competition.

The impact of music

Does music have the same emotional impact as it did in the past? Has technology A a role not only in the way music is composed and recorded but also in its power?

¹____, current technology allows anyone to stream niche videos and download audio clips, which has created a far wider ²____ base for a greater variety of music than the more traditional ³____ forums of the past. Has this ⁴____ the arrival of a new musical age, though?

As a ⁵____ of fact, it has been suggested that technology has had a negative impact on music. This is because it could make composers reluctant to experiment, relying instead on what has always been popular. This might appear to create a uniformity of sound, which some feel has led to a ⁶____ in musicality.

This opinion is not universally held, ⁷____ there are comments which have been ⁸____ on music websites suggesting that technology has contributed towards reducing music's emotional impact.

Is technology good for the sport of motor racing?

The roar of the engines and speed of the cars generate tremendous excitement (excite), as spectators cheer on the top drivers.

Now, as ever more technological advances enhance performance, critics question the modern approach to racing. They say affluent teams have an advantage, as they can ¹____ (capital) on their financial resources to develop cars that allow them to remain in the ²____ (ascend), while others fall by the wayside. ³____ (presume), such critics also feel the complexity of the machinery has replaced simple driving skills, thus depriving the sport of its basic ⁴____ (authentic).

However, advances in car design bring benefits beyond the racetrack – mechanical ⁵____ (break) in racing car design filter down to the mass market. For example, rearview mirrors date back to the 1900s, when racing drivers realised their ⁶____ (effect) for revealing competitors behind them.

Clearly, although the sport remains popular with fans, it's technology that guarantees its continuing commercial success.

The Rebirth of Apprenticeships

Apprenticeships are currently experiencing a renaissance as a hands-on alternative to academic study at a higher education institution. Today, we offer the views of four young people currently enrolled in various apprenticeship programmes in the UK.

A J. Reynard, 18

I'm in my first year of a three-year HR apprenticeship at a well-known British bank and, although it was a shock to be thrown in at the deep end, as I was expected to be on a par with everyone else, I really feel I made the right decision in taking it on. From day one I was plunged into the HR team and expected to contribute to the real workings of the bank. Through a series of placements in the HR department, I've completed projects in all sorts of things from change and growth to personal development and reward. Alongside this I'm studying for an industry-recognised, degree-level HR qualification, so by the time I've finished, I'll have the experience and the all-important piece of paper. The academic assignments are all about utilising your day-to-day experience, making observations and linking in the theory, and for me it has proven to be a very efficient way to learn.

Based on my experiences here, I'd say apprenticeships are great for team-players who have a strong drive to learn and are willing to apply themselves to whatever challenges are thrown their way.

B A. Rawlins, 17

When I was a younger teenager, I was in a fairly bad place personally and emotionally. As a result of some less than positive experiences in my personal life, I missed my chance to go to university, and with everything that went on, the last thing I'd thought about was what I actually wanted to do as a career. So, I decided to take things into my own hands and sign up for some training with a view to finding a job. I didn't have high hopes of being accepted on an apprenticeship to be honest, but lo and behold, here I am two years in and absolutely thriving, I'd say. Working at such a prestigious car company gives me a real sense of pride and people are always intrigued when I say who I work for. There is no denying it's a male-dominated environment, and at first I felt like I had more to prove than the guys who started at the same time as me. However, I showed myself to be capable and competent and quickly earned everyone's respect. If I'm honest, having a sharp tongue helps! I stuck up for myself when I had to and people know not to mess with me now. I think apprenticeships are sometimes overlooked by school leavers, but in my case being an apprentice has provided me with some real direction in life and the added bonus of relative financial stability.

C A. Mendel, 19

My folks are not well off so the only way I could've made it through university would have been to take loans to cover tuition and living. The thought of graduating with tens of thousands of pounds of debt was enough to put me off before I'd even begun. The careers counsellor at my school suggested I try an apprenticeship instead. Frankly speaking, I'd always regarded apprenticeships as being a bit of a lazy option for those who didn't do so well at school, so I was amazed to discover what a wide range of options there actually are out there now. I'm working with my hands, which I love, I've got a stable income, and I'm planning to start my own plumbing business one day. And laziness is strictly out of bounds, let me tell you! If something goes wrong, you realise it could be your fault and you have to take responsibility. It's hard work and long hours. I don't remember the last time I went out during the week – I'm too busy and tired.

D Anonymous, 18

I guess most people wouldn't believe me if I told them I was an apprentice spy, but, as I am sworn to anonymity, that's really only a moot point anyway. The apprenticeship scheme, run by MI5, MI6 and GCHQ (Government Communications Headquarters), has its sights on tackling future threats to national security. There are eighty of us undergoing training in software engineering, telecommunications and mobile phone systems with a view to joining the global fight against cyber crime, terrorism, and espionage. On completion of the two years it takes, we'll have earned a foundation degree in communications, security and engineering as well as a diploma in IT. Traditionally, security service positions are only open to university graduates, but, as was pointed out to us during the selection procedure, you can't learn what we're covering on any undergraduate course because we are actually inside the security services, finding out about the systems needed to protect the country from harm. I think this is a prime example of the way apprenticeships are offering a real alternative to university these days, an alternative which equips anyone with industry specific skills and crucially doesn't leave them owing a small fortune.

- 1 Read the interview with Jonathan. It contains six examples of the word important. Choose the one word in brackets which cannot substitute the word important in the context given.

Extract from Student's Book recording (2.15)

H: What would you say is the most important ¹(crucial / essential / imperative) thing people should do to prepare for a job interview?

J: Well, thinking through your answers and doing plenty of research about the business and the position you're applying for ^ago without saying – ultimately there's ^bnothing more you can do about the direction the interview itself might take. I think cultivating self-assurance ^cplays a very big role – this will help you act as if you're confident when answering questions, though clearly without ^dgoing overboard or pretending you can do things you can't! [...]

It's important ²(vital / imperative / considerable) not to ^edwell on your mistakes, but learn from them. And the odd slip is ^fnot the end of the world. We're all ^ghuman after all. That said, willingness to ^hadmit your missteps is very important ³(urgent / significant / influential) and will be appreciated by the interviewer. And while confidence is important ⁴(fundamental / pivotal / essential), avoid being self-aggrandising or boastful. [...]

I think it's important ⁵(imperative / pressing / paramount) to keep things in proportion. Every interview is important ⁶(extensive / critical / decisive) and it's natural to be nervous – indeed I think for most people having no nerves is unrealistic and striving to do so could even be potentially detrimental.

For the past six years in a row, the £250 billion company Google has been ranked the Number 1 desirable employer to work for by Fortune magazine. Every year two million applicants (apply) strive desperately to be taken on, lured by the perks, which include subsidised childcare, dog sitting, huge bonuses and free meals.

Inevitably, there is a hyper-¹___ (compete) atmosphere at Google and nobody is quite sure of the policy for decisions on ²___ (recruit) other than the necessity to fit in with the company culture.

A massive amount of ³___ (resource) and an unusually high level of ⁴___ (adapt) is clearly required from everyone who works there. In addition, however, there is also a need for ⁵___ (humble), as staff are expected to demonstrate a ⁶___ (willing) to step back and admit their mistakes.

As the team includes former Olympians and people of immense intellectual stature, many people would find the concept of working there extremely intimidating. This is just as well, because for every hundred people who are interviewed, ninety-nine are turned away.

Bizzaro Magazine's Letter of the Month

While I don't think I would ever pass for a psychic or fortune teller, I sometimes think I'm a bit of a freak. Let me explain. Since about the age of 16, I've had these 'feelings' or premonitions about things, which, on several occasions, have turned out to be uncannily true. Last year for example, my friends and I were headed 1 on our annual summer holiday, and I had the unmistakable sense that things were going to go wrong. This was accompanied by a strange burning sensation in my hands. Quite what it meant, I wasn't sure (so I chose not to pass 2 my premonitions to my friends), but I couldn't shake the feeling that something bad was going to happen, or indeed the weird sensation of heat in my hands.

My friends and I have been on holiday together several times and we always look after each other and do our best to travel safely. We check 3 common dangers or annoyances before we leave, and fit 4 with local customs once we've arrived. With this in mind, I was hoping my feelings would just be related to something mundane, such as being ripped 5 while souvenir shopping. What none of us had banked 6 was returning from a night out to find our hotel in flames! The poolside restaurant in which the fire had apparently started was completely burned 7, but luckily no one was killed. However, the chef of the restaurant, who had tried to put out the fire, suffered severe burns to his hands. Coincidence? I guess I'll never know for sure.

My Asian Travel Blog

Two weeks after arriving in Cambodia, I've finally found time to update the blog, this time from a crumbling but friendly Internet café in Phnom Penh. Though harrowing at times, Cambodia has proved to be a feast for the senses, and reminded me of the capacity of travel to make you reassess what is important in life.

1 _____

After many months as a solo traveller, I appear to have lost my shyness, and confidently strike up conversations with anyone who looks like they might be willing to exchange tips or share a ride. So with newly recruited travel companions in tow, it's a three-hour journey ahead to Siam Reap, home to the temples of Angkor, spectacular remnants of the ancient Khmer civilisation.

2 _____

Such journeys lead to healthy appetites and, as we head out for dinner that night feeling happy to be alive, our hunger is made all the more ravenous by the ubiquitous smell of burning wood that permeates the air. The source of these inviting wafts is actually the hardwood charcoal that burns and smoulders all day in the population's small clay stoves and beneath its woks and pots of soup.

3 _____

I make the mistake of being tempted by a staple left over from French colonial days – coffee. Dinner finishes with several hot cups, which back at the hostel keep me awake until the early hours.

4 _____

Considering Cambodia's volatile recent history, it's hard not to think that things may have been easier for citizens of those by-gone times. Since the 1960s, the Cambodian people have suffered the bloody consequences of internal and external conflicts. Vast swathes of the countryside remain littered with unexploded landmines. The cleanup operation is slow, accidents are common, and yet, Cambodia's citizens have done an admirable job of rebuilding.

5 _____

At night, infamous clubs such as 'The Heart of Darkness' draw patrons into their dingy depths, where visitors and locals writhe to pulsating electronic beats. By day, much of the tourism revolves around the heartbreaking events of the early 1970s, when internal conflict tore the country apart.

6 _____

As I pack up my fancy camera and expensive shoes and head for the coast, it is difficult not to feel uncomfortable about the relative wealth and good fortune that were the accidents of my birth. At least I have the perspective now, and later this year, when I return home, I will try to recall the positivity of these charming people, who have so little and have been through so much, and begin every day thinking how truly lucky I am.

1 Read the main article without the missing paragraphs and put the pictures in the order they are mentioned.

2 Read the article again. Match paragraphs A–G with gaps 1–6. There is one extra paragraph.

A It is the latter of these delights that my new friends and I opt for that evening. Originating in Vietnam, the Cambodian version of Pho we slurp hungrily is, like much of the country's cuisine, a delicious combination of bitter and sweet, sour and salty, presented simply and accompanied by myriad condiments.

B I get lost, and walk through lively markets and pass spirited street vendors pushing rolling woks and grills on wheels, riding motorbikes with stoves attached to the side, and cruising on bicycles with mango-filled baskets attached to the back. The scene is one of hustle and bustle and is frankly, a little overwhelming at first.

C Having crossed the Thai border into Poipet, I weigh up my options for onward travel. An old public bus rumoured to take around six hours, a tourist mini-bus leaving in two hours, or a taxi offering relative comfort and immediate departure. I decide on the taxi and quickly accost three strangers, fellow travellers, who are thankfully happy to share the cost and the journey.

D And yet here too, the attitude is 'onwards and upwards'. The city is overflowing with life and is a bustling business and cultural hub. I chat to 'Chivy', the owner of a small coffee stall, who tells me her name means 'life', which seems highly appropriate as she is bursting with it. Like many young entrepreneurs, she's working all hours to turn only a small profit, but her optimism is unshakeable and her smile as infectious as those worn by the rest of the population.

E Putting such thoughts aside for the moment, it's onwards to the capital, which to be honest, is as scruffy as Angkor is breathtaking. But Phnom Penh has a tantalising rawness to it, and a non-stop sense of life that I find truly mesmerising.

F To say the 200-kilometre road that will take us there is in a state of disrepair would be an understatement. Picture the roughest road you know, then imagine it after an earthquake. Now imagine blasting across it at 70 kph, in the dark, through a dust storm in a battered 15-year-old Toyota driven by a Red Bull fuelled Cambodian chauffeur who looks about the same age as his vehicle. A once in a lifetime experience. Hopefully.

G A touch bleary-eyed, I clamber on the back of a motorbike taxi the next morning and head for the Angkor Wat Temple Complex. I will not even try to put into words the majesty of the place. Suffice to say the countless hyperbolic descriptions that decorate the guidebooks and blogs can be taken pretty much at their word. It is a fascinating window on what used to be a highly-developed civilisation.

3 Match the adjectives in bold in the text to the definitions.

- crumbling* – disintegrating gradually over time
- 1 _____ – present, appearing or found everywhere
- 2 _____ – changing rapidly and unpredictably, especially for the worse
- 3 _____ – extremely sad or distressing
- 4 _____ – particularly hungry
- 5 _____ – deliberately exaggerated
- 6 _____ – pleasantly inviting
- 7 _____ – producing a regular beating sensation or sound
- 8 _____ – having dim or watery eyes because of tiredness

Mel: Chloe, now that you've secured your place at the university, it may be worth considering taking a gap year. It's your best ever opportunity to travel, earn money and get work experience. What do you say?

Chloe: Mmm, I'm not so sure. ¹ _____ I think I'm ready to take the plunge, I come across an article like this and it puts me off going.

Mel: What do you mean?

Chloe: Well, it says here that ² _____ is thinking of taking a gap year should think twice as they can get more than they bargain for. According to this expert, although young people who volunteer to help in orphanages, schools, animal sanctuaries or ³ _____ have good intentions, unscrupulous people may take advantage of them.

Mel: How so?

Chloe: ⁴ _____ there's money involved, there's bound to be someone who wants to get rich fast. In this case, a girl from Oxford went to an orphanage in Asia only to find out that the children she met weren't orphans at all! They had families who had been persuaded by the orphanage founder to send their children there to make money off gap-year volunteers, who paid for the opportunity to help them!

Mel: That's outrageous! But ⁵ _____ depressing this news is, don't give up on the idea of a gap-year adventure. Just do some research beforehand to make sure you choose a legitimate institution.

Chloe: I guess you're right.

2 Choose the correct words to complete the descriptions.

- Judging by the crowds, the photos are each / both taken during some kind of festival or public celebration.
- It is also dissimilar / unlike in that the man pictured here is clearly extremely upset about his predicament.
- These photos are also alike / resemble because they show negative impacts of tourism on the environment.
- The holidays shown are common / related in that they are only suitable for fit, active people who don't mind sleeping outdoors.
- This mode of transport is only suited to short journeys, as compared / contrast to the luxury coach shown in picture B.
- There are other various / notable differences between the two outdoor activities shown here, such as the cost of the equipment required.

3 Read the conversation between two students in Exercise 4 and choose which two photographs are being compared.

A: These photos have various things in common, such as the airport setting, of course, and the fact that they show people who are about to set off on a trip of some sort. They ¹*e*_____ feature two relatively young people who are presumably travelling together and they are ²*b*_____ taken in modern-looking airports. ³*U*_____ the *f*_____ image, the second photo shows people who appear to be travelling for business rather than pleasure, so probably colleagues. Judging by the fact that they seem to be in a hurry, I'd say they are late for their flight. With this in mind, ⁴*a*_____ *c*_____ *d*_____ is the way the people in the photos are likely to be feeling. ⁵*I*_____ *t*_____ *p*_____, they are probably pretty anxious, you know, concerned that they are late and beginning to think of the consequences of missing the plane, ⁶*w*_____ here they are only just checking in and both look relaxed and presumably excited about the prospect of the trip they are going on.

B: Yes, the people here are clearly going on a business trip of some sort. They might be going to attend a meeting, give a presentation or even to close a valuable deal. ⁷*I*_____ *c*_____, in this photo the couple are probably going on holiday, or maybe they're students going on an exchange, or to work overseas during the holidays, or something like that.

A report is organised similarly to a proposal, except that a report analyses a past or current situation and offers recommendations based on this. It may refer to the results of a survey or to an interview. ¹_____ paragraph, should be given a heading linked to its contents or function according to the requirements of the task.

The introduction should summarise the contents of the report followed by the ²_____ main body paragraph, which should set the context. The ³_____ main body paragraph should introduce the ⁴_____ point you wish to present and add supporting details if necessary. The ⁵_____ main body paragraph should state and support a ⁶_____ point and might be used to present some negative aspects. The ⁷_____ paragraph is used to give ⁸_____ or two recommendations based on the evidence that has been presented and the report should ⁹_____ with a short conclusion.

REMEMBER THIS

After verbs suggest and propose we never use an object + infinitive and after recommend we tend to avoid it (especially in everyday contexts) and choose a that-clause or an -ing form

+ suggest you to avoid the ring road. I suggest avoiding the ring road.

+ propose her to stay longer. I propose that she stays longer.

(I recommend him to bring cash.) vs I recommend bringing cash. vs I recommend that he brings cash.

2 Put the words in order to make phrases.

This report sets out to ...

1 is / aim / to ... / report / of / the / this

2 suggest / would / that ... / I

3 interviewed ... / of / those / all

4 some / only / of / part ... / those / taking

5 also / would / recommend ... / I

6 preconditions ... / given / these

3 Read the report and add headings from the box to each paragraph.

Conclusion ~~Introduction~~ Overview
Potential Problems Recommendations
Status as a Great Natural Wonder

Introduction

This report ¹*presents / sets* an overview of Abisko, Sweden and ²*assigns / outlines* why it is worthy of inclusion in the World Travel and Tourism Council's campaign to list the greatest natural wonders on each continent. The report will also ³*deter / identify* potential problems for visitors and make recommendations.

A _____

Abisko is a 77-km² national park in Swedish Lapland lauded for its natural beauty. Situated 250 km north of the Arctic Circle, it is the ideal location from which to see the Aurora Borealis.

B _____

A well-known travel guide recently ⁴*conducted / addressed* a survey which named the Aurora Sky Station visitor centre, Abisko, the quintessential viewing spot from which to experience the Northern Lights. The clear air, the almost permanently cloud-free sky and the lack of manmade light were ⁵*assigned / cited* as major factors in the choice.

In addition to this ⁶*positive / principal* attraction, the wider national park is ideal for those seeking outdoor adventure under the area's famous midnight sun.

C _____

While the ⁷*majority / minority* of visitors encounter favourable conditions, it cannot be guaranteed that everyone will see the Aurora Borealis during their visit. As Abisko is a 17-hour train journey from Stockholm, it is clear that visitors need to be made ⁸*aware / obvious* of this eventuality.

D _____

Those undeterred by the distance must prepare for isolation and extreme cold. I would also definitely ⁹*conduct / advocate* that visitors stick to the principle of leaving nothing (including rubbish) behind them in the national park.

E _____

In the ¹⁰*short / light* of Abisko's current status as the prime location from which to view what is surely one of the globe's most amazing phenomena, I have no hesitation in recommending that it is added to the ETC's list.

4 Choose the correct words to complete the report.

5 Complete the sentences with the words in bold from the model report. Use the information in brackets to help you.

Most respondents reported being undeterred (not put off) by the economic situation in the host country.

- 1 This publisher has been producing the _____ (ultimate) travel guide to Hungary for over a decade.
- 2 Once _____ (admired) as a design classic, The Grand Hotel now lies empty and crumbling.
- 3 Visitors to the volcano should be ready for every _____ (possible outcome) as the nearest town is over 400 km away.
- 4 While some may find the _____ (remoteness) of the islands calming, others will soon begin to miss the comforts of mainland life.
- 5 Beach bums will undoubtedly find the heatwave _____ (positive) but young children and old people would be well-advised to remain indoors in the afternoon.

6 Complete the extracts with the missing words. Some letters are given.

There was a division between the survey respondents into those who enjoyed the resort and those who found it too touristy.

- 1 The p____e of the report is to examine how the increase in tourist numbers has affected the local economy.
- 2 The former were against the idea of self-catering, while the l____r thought it more convenient than staying in a hotel.
- 3 A key issue that ought to be a____d is the erosion caused by so many footsteps on the pathways to the falls.
- 4 My classmates and I were a____ a street corner and asked to interview as many passersby as possible.
- 5 The survey was c____d using tablet computers rather than traditional questionnaires.
- 6 A p____e step would be the introduction of litter bins in the area immediately surrounding the hot spring.

REMEMBER THIS

After verbs suggest, propose and recommend the subjunctive can be used to make your recommendations sound more formal. The subjunctive is a special present tense which has no -s after 3rd person singular verbs and where the same forms are used in both present and past situations.

I suggest that she fly via Dubai or Singapore.

We proposed that she visit the local orphanage.

The travel agency recommended that he bring cash.

The verb to be has a special subjunctive form.

I recommend that he be careful on the overnight train.

We suggest she be given anti-malaria medicine at once.

SHOW WHAT YOU'VE LEARNT

7 Read the writing task. Then follow the instructions below.

The World Travel and Tourism Council has appealed for reports as part of a campaign to promote tourism. The aim of the campaign is to establish a list of the greatest natural wonders on each continent. You have decided to submit a report recommending that a natural wonder you know or have visited is added to the list. In your report, you should give an overview of the chosen natural wonder, explain why you think it deserves to be listed and describe any potential problems visitors might encounter. You should also include some recommendations.

Write your report in 220-260 words in an appropriate style.

- 1 Decide what you need to include in your report according to the task rubric.
- 2 Decide what your headings will be. Do they match what you need to include?
- 3 Decide which natural wonder you will focus on.
- 4 Think of the main things to include in an overview (location, environment type, etc.).
- 5 Think why the place deserves to be included in the campaign.
- 6 Think of potential problems visitors might encounter during a visit.
- 7 Decide what your recommendations will be.
- 8 Select the most important information. Remember the word limit.
- 9 Plan and write your report.

SHOW THAT YOU'VE CHECKED

Finished? Always check your writing (especially in the exam!) Can you tick ✓ everything on this list?

In my report ...

- in the introduction, I have summarised the aim of the report in my own words.
- in the first main body paragraph, I have given any information needed to set the context.
- in the second main body paragraph, I have stated and supported my first point.
- in the third main body paragraph, I have stated and supported my second point and possibly presented some negative aspects or problems.
- in the penultimate main body paragraph, I have given some recommendations based on the evidence I have presented.
- I have used a reasonably formal and impersonal style.
- I have checked my spelling.
- I have written 220-260 words.
- my handwriting is neat enough for someone else to read.

Lorde is many things. Real name Ella Yelich-O'Connor, she's a chart phenomenon who has sold millions of records around the world, a double Grammy-winner, and the Best International Female Artist at 2014's Brit Awards. She is a poet of intelligent teenage disaffection, as proven on her breakthrough single Royals. And she's the BFF of Taylor Swift, whose 18th birthday message on her Instagram account: 'It's Ella's 18th birthday technically but we all know she's really 300 and knows all the secrets of the universe', does much to capture O'Connor's maturity and wisdom. As is evident in her anti-consumerist lyrics, feminist messaging and thoughtful electronic balladry, Lorde is also entirely her own person, which is no mean feat in a contemporary pop world of pasteurised homogeneity. On the wintry afternoon that we meet, her familiar gothic tumble of hair is scraped and tied back, and she's pale and make-up free, with no attempt to hide the acne troubling her cheeks.

As we settle into her room at a boutique hotel in east London, her mother exiled to the lobby downstairs, I ask her what she's wearing and her reply is cheerfully vague: 'Some, like, trousers, some boots ... My jumper? I think it's from New Zealand,' she says, referring to her home country. 'I cut the labels out of everything – they scratch me.' Lorde's circumspection about designer brands, red carpets and celebrity culture was there from the outset, and is articulated in her worldwide smash hit Royals. The lyrics spoke to an audience, young and old, hungry for something more real in mainstream music, and when the song brought her some of the trappings she had dismissed in it, it only served to stiffen her resolve.

'I'd just turned 16, and people wanted me to do red carpets and I was, like, 'I'm still getting used to how I look and I'm still growing.' And I don't want to just feel sad because someone said, "Ooh, she's on the worst-dressed list!" So I thought, "I don't have to do this if I don't want to." The power to say no is not one that many up-and-coming artists seem to possess, and on occasion Lorde has been told, 'Everyone else does it, so why wouldn't you?' But she has stood her ground. A lot of my audience, they're younger than me or the same age, and a lot of the decisions I make are about trying to portray this whole weird fame-storm that's partnered her with Joel Little, an established musician twice her age, to help develop her compositional skills. Soon her poetry and short stories gave way to lyrics. She wrote about herself, her peers and their suburb, and the suburb beyond it. The claustrophobic bubble of New Zealand was both a stone in her shoe and her inspiration. O'Connor's sound is simple yet cinematic, spinning tales of real teenage dreams – penniless but happy nights out full of longing and loneliness – that reject clichés of mindless fun and hedonistic decadence.

'From the outset, I have written about and for my peers and friends. It is a unifying thing, a call to arms,' she says. 'You never hear people making generalisations about adults, yet everyone will make them about teenagers. People forget that we are human beings and that we think differently from each other.' Her thoughtful take on teenage life is a million miles from the histrionic show-off tactics of Miley Cyrus, the young American singer who drew criticism for the risqué video for her 2013 hit, Wrecking Ball. O'Connor is a self-professed feminist who has attacked the pernicious effect of Photoshop culture on young girls' self-esteem, but she insists that she isn't purposefully setting herself up as an anti-Cyrus figure. 'That is definitely an older person's reaction to my songs,' she says.

If teenage stardom can seem like a guaranteed ticket to adult excess, O'Connor, with her concerned mother waiting outside our interview, possesses a maturity that is, for now, inoculating her from the madness growing around her. 'What I am doing now, I am learning so much that I couldn't learn at any university at any age,' she says. 'Every time I get on stage I learn something new. I'm evolving all the time. My next record could sound completely different.'

happening to me as realistically as possible.' Ella Marija Lani Yelich-O'Connor has always been a teenager of a different stripe. She grew up in a nice beachside suburb of Auckland, the second of four children. Her mother, a poet, and her father, a civil engineer, created a home environment that was cultured and inquiring, and Ella was a voracious and precocious reader. Aged 13, she signed a record company development deal after a label executive saw a video of her singing Duffy's Warwick Avenue at a school talent show. But her goal wasn't to be a singer – she wanted to write, so the label

Top Tips For Taking Great Photos

Are you the owner of a single-lens reflex camera or a simple point-and-shoot camera? if so, here are some ways to help you take a memorable snap:

1 Watch the light

It is a rookie mistake to assume that flash is to be used only when it's dark or when you're inside a room. Any good photographer will tell you that prior to taking a photo, you need to know the light source. It may turn out that your subject's face is unevenly lit by the sun so, ¹ _____, you might need to switch on flash even in daylight to dispose of any imperfections.

2 Get close

Before pressing the shutter button, zoom in or take a step or two towards your subject. ² _____, you will miss out on all the interesting details such as freckles, smiles or telling gazes. However, if you get too close to them (³ _____, see the manual), it will result in blurry photographs.

3 Composition is everything

It's not recommended to place your subject in the middle of the picture but to move it away to either side. Before recomposing the picture, however, don't forget to lock the focus on the subject by pressing and holding the shutter button halfway down. Why? Because ⁴ _____ you own an auto-focus camera, most of them focus only on the subject that is in the centre of the viewfinder.

THE YEAR OF DANGEROUS SELFIES

The year 2015 is often referred to as The Year of Dangerous Selfies. In doubt as to the origins of the name, let's just take a quick look at the statistics. A group of seven Indian men drowned after their boat capsized. They thought that standing on one side of the boat would lead to a nice selfie. ¹ _____, it led to their untimely demise. A Spanish citizen, aged 17, lost his life when he tried to take a photo of himself during the running of the bulls festival. ² _____ if we make allowances for his young age, he should have known better. Two Russian men had a really outlandish idea of taking a photo with a hand grenade after removing the pin. Seldom, ³ if _____, do such stories end well. Needless to say, this one didn't. In the following months the death toll continued and, if ⁴ _____, you can find the remaining data on our website. It seems that those people have lost their survival instinct and they behaved as if they ⁵ _____ indestructible. So next time you decide to take a selfie, use your common sense. If ⁶ _____, it may cost your life.

Make room for 'Room' on your bookshelf

- A The screenplay, which was written by Donoghue herself, manages to capture the essence of the novel without foregoing all its power. However, what is lost is the child's perspective that made such difficult subject matter intimate and enthralling on the page. ¹ _____, this is a problem confined largely to the first half of the film and the second act does an admirable job of ² _____ the mother and son's struggle to return to the society they were isolated from for so long.
- B Donoghue's ³ _____ unsettling yet life-affirming novel became a literary sensation shortly after its publication in 2010, largely thanks to her uncanny ability to get inside the psyche of an unusually sheltered young boy. The book tells the ⁴ _____ of the aftermath of the kidnapping and imprisonment of Larson's character and the subsequent escape and re-entry to society of 'Ma' and Jack, her beloved son.
- C All in all, I ⁵ _____ recommend the novel highly enough, and despite the rather muddled first half, the film is certainly worth two hours of your time.
- D Can you imagine what it would be like to spend 24 hours a day locked in the same room with no access to the outside world and only your mother for company? This is reality, as it has always been for Jack, the five-year-old ⁶ _____ in Emma Donoghue's magnificent novel Room. Now ⁷ _____ for the big screen starring Brie Larson as 'Ma' and newcomer Jacob Tremblay as Jack, the film version is extremely well-acted and deeply touching, but ⁸ _____ to fully translate the compelling and unique nature of the book.

5 Replace the adjectives in bold with very where possible.

Both the novel and the film are really / very inspiring for anyone with an interest in snow sports.

- 1 The final scene is utterly / _____ ridiculous and spoils what was otherwise a worthy adaptation.
- 2 The main character is deeply / _____ disturbed and makes a string of appalling decisions which eventually lead to his downfall.
- 3 As the loving owner of two dogs, I found certain scenes extremely / _____ difficult to watch.
- 4 Ultimately, the fate of the main character is truly / _____ heart-breaking and leaves the reader feeling lucky to be alive.

6 Choose the correct adjectives to complete the extracts from reviews.

- 1 The costumes and the special effects were absolutely / very amazing considering the budget limitations.
- 2 While undoubtedly engrossing, there is no denying the story is profoundly / refreshingly upsetting.
- 3 In comparison with the film version and all its omissions and flaws, the novel is rather / totally perfect.
- 4 As expected, the latest offering from everyone's favourite animation studio is painfully / vastly entertaining.
- 5 Whereas the life-affirming novel never ceases to delight, the TV series is highly / surprisingly dull.
- 6 Exercise caution before curling up under the covers with this novel, as it is, by any standards, extremely / very terrifying.
- 7 Comic fanboys and cosplay enthusiasts will undoubtedly find the film tediously / totally enthralling, but frankly, I struggled to stay awake past the half-hour mark.

REMEMBER THIS

Very can be used as an intensifier in the structure definite article/possessive pronoun + very + noun. It emphasises the significance, appropriateness or relevance of the noun in a particular context.

The very idea that this book could ever be turned into a film has seemed preposterous until now.

His very name conjures glamour, danger and intrigue.

7 Tick the sentences where quite means extremely.

- From the very first page to the very last, Saunders' short story collection is quite delightful.
- 1 Without wishing to include a spoiler, I can report the twist at the end of Herman's novel is quite surprising.
 - 2 There are so many thrills and spills along the way that by the end of the film, the viewer is quite exhausted.
 - 3 The main problem is with the plot, which is so absurd as to be quite unbelievable.
 - 4 After constructing my own image of the hero while reading the novel, I found it quite distracting that such a famous face was cast in the role.

SHOW WHAT YOU'VE LEARNT

8 Read the writing task. Then follow the instructions below.

Your school website has introduced a 'review' section. Write a review of a book or film you have read or watched for the section. You may compare more than one title or, for example, a book and its adaptation for the screen. You should describe the plot briefly, give a detailed evaluation and make a recommendation to the reader.

Write your review in 220-260 words in an appropriate style.

- 1 Decide on the topic of your review – a book, a film, a book and film adaptation, a film and its sequel/remake.
- 2 Briefly note down a plot summary.
- 3 Note down positive and negative points about the item(s) you have chosen to review.
- 4 If reviewing two things, make notes on how they compare.
- 5 Decide what your recommendation(s) will be.
- 6 Select the most important information. Remember the word limit.
- 7 Plan and write your review.

Lucy Riches was first brought to the public's attention in a 1 of publicity with the publication of her first novel at the age of thirteen. Only a year later she was the proud 2 of the Bookclub Prize, an extremely 3 award for any writer, let alone a teenager.

The Chosen is a terrifying and action-4 fantasy novel with an imaginative 5 of characters. Lucy was determined to break away from stereotypical novels aimed at young people and has turned out a 6 different one. She also wanted to create a piece that would have a 7-chilling plot.

Lucy, now a level-headed fifteen-year old, has just finished the second novel in what will be a three-part series, which is to 8 readers' imaginations even more than the first one. She's currently 9 her breath to hear her publisher's verdict on the new book.

Is the cinema dead?

For many years now, people have been predicting the end of the cinema. After all, why would you bother to go when films can be accessed on laptops and smartphones? In 1 case, haven't young people rejected film-going in favour 2 playing video games instead?

The exception to this, of course, is big budget Hollywood blockbusters, when young people seem to pack cinemas 3. Recently, however, there has been a drive to make films specifically targeting the 'grey market.' It was predicted that if cinemas 4 to start offering reduced prices mid-week and a more luxurious cinema-going experience, with more comfortable seats and provision of drinks and snacks, older people would be more likely to attend. They were right.

Meanwhile, adventurous young people are being attracted by 5 known as 'Secret Cinema', 6 audiences pay upfront to see unnamed films in undisclosed venues such as disused schools and warehouses.

So, against all expectations, the cinema is clearly still alive and kicking more than eighty years after 'talking pictures' first hit the screen.

Edward Snowden • collocations • phrases

Glossary

the intelligence community (n) = collective term for government security organisations such as the UK's MI5 or the US's National Security Agency hitherto (adv) = until now, or until the point in time under discussion

bemoan (v) = complain or express sorrow about something surveillance (n) = the act of watching something or someone carefully especially in an effort to prevent or detect a crime

flee (v) = run away from danger espionage (n) = spying, usually referring to state or government sanctioned spying

For the intelligence community, June 5, 2013 is a date that will not quickly be forgotten. For it was on that day that Edward Snowden, a hitherto unknown American contractor with the US's National Security Agency, revealed many of the secret methods employed by America and its allies to spy on both their citizens and their enemies.

Depending on whose opinion you're canvassing, Snowden is regarded as either the world's most successful cyber-surveillance hero or a pernicious traitor who is quite possibly an agent employed by a foreign government. While he and his supporters remain adamant that they were independently performing a vital public service, security officials bemoan the extent to which the revelations have inflicted damage on their intelligence-gathering operations.

On one level, the Snowden affair had the comic effect of requiring some of the world's most senior political figures, such as German Chancellor Angela Merkel and French President François Hollande to change their mobile phone numbers for fear that American eavesdroppers were monitoring their conversations. The leaks also shocked the public by revealing the extent to which governments were secretly gathering data on their own citizens. Of most concern to intelligence agencies, though, has been the impact Snowden's revelations have had on the way they go about their business. Since the leaks, terror groups and hostile organisations have apparently implemented radical changes in the way they communicate, thereby making it even more difficult for the intelligence community to decode their messages and track their activities.

Even without the knock-on effects of Snowden's intervention, modern-day code-breaking is immensely challenging. During the Second World War, building on the work of Polish code-breakers and aided by the capture of German code books, British mathematicians such as Alan Turing were able to independently decode and read vital enemy communications, which arguably helped turn the tide against the Nazis and led to their eventual defeat. However, today's software is so much more advanced and can automatically encrypt data, making it much more challenging to decipher without outside assistance. This is why, according to Western spy agencies, close working ties were formed between themselves and many of the world's leading Internet providers. Pre-Snowden, this cooperation enabled surveillance organisations to provide vital intelligence that helped disrupt terror plots and tackle enemies, but they now report that their ability to maintain high-level surveillance on potential threats to security has been severely hampered.

Since fleeing Hong Kong, the city from which he made his revelations, Snowden has led a curious existence in Moscow – to some a hero, to others a traitor. He is reportedly working in 'the information technology field'. In 2014, he was joined in Russia by his girlfriend, and the following month his permission to remain in Russia was extended to three years. Although he has not yet been given political asylum, some observers predict he will never leave the safety of Russia. Snowden himself has said he would love to return to America and does not fear the trial and likely imprisonment that would almost certainly await him if he did.

1 Read the article quickly and choose the best title.

 - A highlight the similarities between Edward Snowden and Alan Turing.
 - B explain the origins of Internet-based surveillance.
 - C emphasise the difficulties faced by contemporary surveillance organisations.
 - D explain why different countries now cooperate on global surveillance.
- 3 In paragraph 4, the author informs us that Snowden
 - A is currently working for the Russians.
 - B will spend the rest of his life in Moscow.
 - C might be granted political asylum for another three years.
 - D still faces a future which is unresolved.
- 4 According to the article, which statement is true about Edward Snowden?
 - A He is idolised by the Russian people.
 - B He is cautious about the prospect of returning to his homeland.
 - C He has no doubt that his actions were the right thing to do.
 - D He regrets the fact that his revelations may have made espionage more difficult.

Adding emphasis

1 Expand the prompts to complete the experts' views.

We asked a number of experts how they think the Internet will evolve over the next decade. Here is what they said ...

no / question
There's no question that everyone's privacy is under threat.

one / thing / disturb / me
1 _____ that it will become easier for authorities to spy on us all in the name of national security.

absolutely / certain / my view
2 _____ that health care will improve as a result of Internet-based technology.

we / need / aware / fact 3 _____ that as cameras get smaller, they will be, literally, everywhere, transmitting data about our every move.

not / overlook / fact
4 _____ that connectivity will become even more widespread through mobile, wearable and embedded computing.

I / not / convince
5 _____ that the future is all bright and I have serious concerns about the possible breakdown of traditional interpersonal relationships.

2 In each sentence, choose the option which is not possible.

- 1 And don't forget / bother / overlook the fact that this games console is accompanied by two controllers as standard.
- 2 There's no point / question / doubt that rechargeable batteries represent better value for money than disposable ones.
- 3 The one thing that really bothers / disturbs / disagrees me is how easily kids can access adult content on their phones.
- 4 I think the key crux / thing / issue is to encourage people away from screens and into the great outdoors.
- 5 What's critical / cognizant / crucial is to check your privacy settings and change your passwords regularly.
- 6 I'm absolutely certain / adamant / decided in my view that technology has improved our lives.

3 Replace the words in bold in the dialogues with the words from the box so that the meaning is the same.

adamant cognizant disturbs doubt forget main point sure

Conversation 1: Pauline and Gina

P: I hear that in the US, some supermarket chains, particularly those with stores in affluent areas, get their cashiers to ask every customer whether they'd like to contribute to charity at the checkout. I'm not convinced / sure that that's fair really. There's no question / _____ that asking the public in that way puts pressure on people to contribute, whether they want to or not.

G: Well, to some extent I agree. I mean, we need to be aware / _____ of the fact that it is morally questionable to shame people into giving, but having said that we shouldn't overlook / _____ the fact that most people living in such places can probably afford to give a few cents on top of their weekly shop. The crux of the issue / _____ is whether it's more important to raise money for charity or to protect the rights of those who might feel unduly pressured.

Conversation 2: Matthew and Jake

M: Jenny and I had a big argument yesterday.

J: Oh dear. About what?

M: About the fact that she spends so much time on her phone. The one thing that really bothers / _____ me is that she ignores me, you know? I can be telling her a whole story then she looks up from her phone half way through and says 'What?'

J: I know exactly what you mean. I think lots of people are guilty of that these days. I'm absolutely certain / _____ in my view that so-called communication technology is damaging our personal relationships in certain ways.

8.7 Writing

A formal email/letter

- 1 Complete the advice with the words from the box. There are two extra words.

formal organisation persuasive reasons reiterate responding salutation sign support

When writing a formal email or letter, begin with an appropriate ¹ _____ and inform the reader what the letter is ² _____ to or regarding. Briefly state your ³ _____ for writing and then, in the second paragraph, introduce your first point and ⁴ _____ it with examples. Start another new paragraph to introduce and support your second point and again, another new paragraph to conclude and ⁵ _____ your point of view. At the end of your email or letter, be sure to ⁶ _____ off appropriately.

would be pointless. ²*Truly equal / Equally true*, however, is that in the 21st century, the Internet is used constantly to search for answers to all manner of questions that arise during our working and private lives. If the role of education is to prepare us for real life, then perhaps traditional assessment methods do need to be overhauled. Today's reality is that, rather than regurgitating facts, students need to demonstrate their ability to filter, interpret and apply online data. ³*We should not / Should we not* therefore, in addition to encouraging retention of core knowledge, include at least some exam questions that allow the use of the Internet and test these skills?

Taking the author's example of languages, ⁴*it would / would it* indeed be difficult to argue that Internet access during exams is appropriate for all subjects. However, ⁵*were tasks / tasks were* designed appropriately, some subjects would be more suited to the digital equivalent of open-book assessment. Contrary to your reporter's claims, I do not believe this would necessarily reduce the level of challenge these exams present. As a case in point, many professional exams are open-book, and far from making them easier, the wealth of information to hand and the limited time available create challenges akin to the realities of the world of work.

To conclude, while I agree that allowing students to copy online facts during exams would be absurd, and that not all subjects would be suited to exams where Internet access is permitted, ⁶*above all / all above* I feel that the realities of modern life should be reflected by the education system and its methods of assessment. If questions were designed to test critical thinking and interpretation of facts, then it is my view that allowing Internet access for certain exams or tasks would be a step in the right direction.

Yours faithfully
G. Benson

- 2 Read the task and the model letter and underline arguments that refer to the three bullet points in the task.

You have read an article about allowing students Internet access during exams in the online edition of a British newspaper. You decide to respond to the article by writing a letter to the editor, giving your own views. Your letter should include responses to these points from the article:

- Allowing Internet access during exams goes against the whole idea of traditional evaluation and would mean a complete redesign of the assessment process.
- Students won't retain core subject knowledge if they can simply copy facts from websites during exams.
- What is the point of, for example, a language exam, if students can just use an online translation tool? Exams are easier than they were these days anyway, without dumbing them down even further by allowing Internet access.

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to a recent article in your newspaper about whether to allow students to use the Internet during exams. While the author offered several reasons to maintain the status quo, she failed to mention any arguments to the contrary.

It is ¹*certainly true / truly certain* that core knowledge is important and that an exam where students simply copy facts from a website

SHOW WHAT YOU'VE LEARNT

- 6 Read the writing task. Then follow the instructions below.

You have read an article about online lectures as an alternative to live lectures for university students in the online edition of a British newspaper. You decide to respond to the article by writing to the editor, giving your own views. Your letter should include responses to these points from the article:

- Information presented in live lectures may be easier to remember because students are stimulated by circumstances such as the lecturer's presentation style, the lecture venue and other students' reactions.
- Live lectures help students to develop skills such as discerning subtle arguments and making judgements when taking notes, as well as giving them an opportunity to make comments and ask questions.
- Attending lectures is a valuable part of the collective student experience and enough time is spent alone in front of screens already these days.

Write your email/letter in 300–350 words in an appropriate style.

- 1 Read the task carefully and check who you are writing to and why.
- 2 Decide whether or not you agree with the three points mentioned in the task.
- 3 Note down more arguments for and against.
- 4 Using your notes decide on your overall point of view.
- 5 Think how you will respond to each point in the task and how you will support your arguments.
- 6 Decide which language to use to sound persuasive.
- 7 Plan and write your letter remembering the word limit.

Taking Out the Trash

My name is Lauren Singer. I'm a 23-year-old girl living in NYC and I don't make trash. Nada. No garbage bin, no landfill.

1

I didn't always live what's called a 'zero-waste life', but started making the shift about three years ago while working towards an Environmental Studies degree at New York University. At the time, I had become president of a club that hosted weekly talks on environmental topics. As such, I considered myself a true environmentalist, or as my grandma liked to call me, 'a real tree hugger'. Everyone, including myself, thought of me as the 'sustainability' girl, so obviously, I was doing my best to live a green and sustainable lifestyle, wasn't I?

One night after a class at the university, I went home and started making that night's dinner. And then it happened. I opened my refrigerator, and I froze. Every item was wrapped or packaged, one way or another, in plastic.

3

In practice, my resolution to do without this ubiquitous substance meant learning to produce all of the products that would have come packaged in it myself. This included everything from toothpaste to cleaning products. I didn't know where to begin, so I took to the Internet to search for solutions. While online, I stumbled across a blog called Zero-Waste Home, which followed the life of Bea Johnson, wife and mother of two children who all live a zero-waste life in California.

4

Inspired by what I'd read, I stopped buying packaged products altogether and began bringing my own bags and jars to fill with bulk products at the supermarket. I also stopped buying new clothing, and shopped only second-hand. On top of this, I downsized my possessions significantly by selling, donating, or giving away superfluous things such as the 10 pairs of jeans that I hadn't worn since high school, and the hordes of decorative items to which I felt no attachment.

Of course, the transition didn't happen overnight. The process took more than a year and required lots of small changes, but I'm happy to say it was worth it. Living in a way that aligns with my values has inspired others and improved my life hugely. I spend less time and money shopping, I eat healthy locally-grown produce and I'm proud of what I've achieved, which makes me generally less stressed out and far more content.

I didn't adopt this lifestyle to make a statement; I did it because it is the absolute best way I know to live in a way that aligns with everything I believe in.

1 Quickly read the article without the missing paragraphs and number pictures A–D in the order they correspond to the text.

2 Read the article again. Match gaps 1–6 with paragraphs A–G. There is one extra paragraph.

- A The realisation that I was equally culpable of generating all this unnecessary waste left me feeling like a total hypocrite, and in that revelatory moment, feeling like part of the problem, I made the decision to eliminate all plastic from my life.
- B In addition to this clearout, a vital step in my journey towards waste-free living was consciously pre-empting potentially wasteful situations. This involved saying no to things like single use plastics such as straws in my drinks at cafés, and plastic or paper bags at stores.
- C Debatable. In one of my classes at NYU, I had noticed that a fellow student always brought a ton of plastic as part of her meal, and then would throw it all away when finished. This upset me, especially as we were part of an Environmental Studies class. She could have used a paper bag, a reusable box, metal cutlery or a flask to carry her water in.
- D I never anticipated that actively choosing not to produce waste would turn into my having a better quality of life in general. It was just a way to align my day to day life with my values. But what was, at first, a lifestyle decision, then became a blog and has now blossomed into what I hope will prove to be a successful eco-friendly business.
- E In spite of this, I now make a grocery list when I go shopping, which means being prepared and not grabbing expensive items impulsively. Additionally, buying food in bulk means not paying a premium, and when it comes to my wardrobe, I shop second-hand and get my clothes at a heavily discounted price.
- F I know what you're thinking, though. This girl must be a total hippie, or a liar, or the figment of someone's overactive imagination. Well, I assure you, I'm none of those things; in fact I'm basically just your ordinary New York City girl, who made a decision to change the way she lives 'for the greener'.
- G I thought, 'if someone with so many responsibilities can go all the way, then I, as a 21-year-old single girl in NYC, certainly can too.' So, I braced myself for the next logical step in my journey and took the leap from zero-plastic to zero-waste.

- 2 Complete the first part of the description. First letters are given.

These two pictures show differing visions of the future. Image A has an almost nightmarish quality to it and is probably rather far-fetched, whereas picture B looks more realistic to me.

I 'p_____ t_____ in image A, the planet we can see in the sky is Earth, meaning that this creature 'c_____ be an alien of some sort. Having said that, we can't 'r_____ o_____ the p_____ that this is someone's idea of what humans might eventually evolve into. Ironically, it 'w_____ a_____ that the landscape is suffering the effects of environmental pollution much like those we are currently experiencing on Earth.

It's not completely clear what the message is here, but I 's_____ that it's a comment on human beings' impact on the health of our planet. Though 'u_____ to actually happen, perhaps, the story is that we managed to leave Earth after it became uninhabitable, and then repeated the same catastrophic errors and ruined whichever planet we moved to next. Judging by how bad we are as a race at learning from the mistakes of the past, I'd say this is quite 'l_____.

- 3 Choose the correct words to complete the second half of the description. In one case both words are possible.

In comparison to picture A, image B presents a rather more coherent and positive view of the future, in my opinion. Clear skies and vegetation 'suggest / appear that environmental problems 'must / may well have been brought under control. There's an interesting contrast between the traditional house in the foreground and the futuristic city in the background. There's also a telephone mast, which is 'tentatively / presumably obsolete, as I very much 'doubt / envisage that we'll be using cables to carry communication signals in the future. It would 'seem / imagine that there are flying vehicles of some sort hovering over the city.

I don't know 'if / whether this is a realistic vision of the future, but it is 'definitely / likely more appealing and more believable than the one presented in picture A.

It is well-¹k_____ that scientists have been cloning plants and animals successfully for decades. In ²r_____ y_____, scientific advances have brought the possibility of human cloning out of the realms of pure science fiction and closer to science-fact. Not ³e_____ a_____ that this represents a step forward and there is seemingly no ⁴s_____ a_____ when it comes to the ethics involved. ⁵W_____ some people are in no ⁶d_____ that cloning is the future of regenerative medicine and could help couples who are unable to have children by other methods, ⁷o_____ believe the process poses insurmountable moral hurdles.

4 Choose the correct words and phrases to complete the rest of the essay.

Without ¹a / no doubt, there are substantial arguments against human cloning, especially cloning an entire human being. ²To begin with / In the beginning, those with religious beliefs may view it as 'playing god', and on this basis, dismiss the idea outright. At the other ³end / side of the spectrum, proponents have suggested that armies of clones could be created to fight wars, or do menial jobs in our places. ⁴However / Furthermore, considering most right-minded people desire peace over war, and a job over unemployment, this scenario is hopefully not destined to become a reality. ⁵On the other hand / Moreover, if clones were created to be exact thinking and feeling copies of ourselves, then undoubtedly they should be entitled to the same rights, ⁶meaning / due to they ought not to be enslaved, mistreated or killed for our benefit.

⁷Never mind / On the flipside, there are arguments in favour of cloning. ⁸Then / Firstly, there's the idea that it could save lives by helping repair or replace human organs without the fear of rejection currently associated with transplants. Research suggests organs could be grown in laboratories, meaning this kind of regenerative medicine would not require the cloning of a full human being. ⁹Additionally / Unless, cloning has the potential to help couples who are unable to conceive a child through natural means, or by IVF. The implantation of a cloned embryo could allow such couples to realise the dream of having a child who carries their own DNA.

¹⁰All things considered / No matter, there are persuasive arguments on both sides. I am inclined to believe that while it would be ethically unacceptable to create and use living, breathing human beings for our own benefit, the chance to improve medicine or help infertile couples should be seized upon.

Eat breakfast and lose weight

Eating breakfast helps teenagers lose weight, a survey of eating a in the United States has found. The study showed that those who have a ¹___ meal at breakfast time – and therefore end up with a higher ²___ intake – are more likely to be within a healthy weight range than those who ³___ the first meal of the day.

Although it may seem ⁴___ to swallow, the people who ate more did more ⁵___ activity during the day, and that may be because they didn't feel so ⁶___. Dr Pereira, who led the research, said that even cooked breakfasts were better than missing out on food altogether. 'While it's best to ⁷___ for a healthy option – a wholegrain cereal for instance – the evidence does ⁸___ that eating anything is better than eating nothing.'

Other studies have also shown that those who eat breakfast are less likely to feel ⁹___ mid-morning and snack on high-fat foods before lunch. They therefore have a more ¹⁰___ diet.

Dr Pereira said: 'This study clearly supports what other studies have shown: kids who don't eat breakfast tend to ¹¹___ on more weight.' This obviously has a ¹²___ effect on their long-term health. Missing breakfast is a common approach to dieting, particularly among teenage girls, but they would do well to heed advice and develop a taste for breakfast.

Space 'smells like fried steak'

NASA has commissioned Steven Pearce, a chemist and managing director of a fragrance manufacturing company, to recreate the smell ¹ _____ space in a laboratory. His research ² _____ be used to help astronauts prepare ³ _____ the conditions they will encounter in space. Mr Pearce began working for NASA in August and hopes to ⁴ _____ recreated the smell of space ⁵ _____ the end of the year.

He had done some work for an art exhibition in July ⁶ _____ was based entirely on smell, and ⁷ _____ of the things he created was the smell of the inside of ⁸ _____ Mir space station. NASA heard about it and contacted Mr Pearce to see if he could help them recreate the smell of space ⁹ _____ order to help their astronauts.

Interviews with astronauts after they had been outside and then returned to the space station reveal a few clues ¹⁰ _____ to what space smells like. ¹¹ _____ the time they were taking off their space suits and helmets, they all reported quite particular odours.

Apparently, ¹² _____ comes across is a smell of fried steak, hot metal and even welding a motorbike. So the purpose of Mr Pearce's task is ¹³ _____ create realism for the astronauts, who are trained in their suits by ¹⁴ _____ put in big water tanks to simulate the loss of gravity.

'We have already produced the smell of fried steak, ¹⁵ _____ hot metal is proving more difficult,' said Mr Pearce.

TASK 2

New York City wildlife research

Join our project to help lead the way in urban ecosystem research and show how the environment can be protected in and near the places most of ¹ _____ live. At research sites in and around New York City, as ² _____ as in some rural areas, you'll study a range of wildlife species and the quality of their varied habitats. ³ _____ on the time of year, you may track and camera-trap mammals, catch frogs and salamanders in nets or pitfall traps, identify birds, or survey native and invasive plant species. Each day you'll also ⁴ _____ able to learn about the 'big picture' of the research, gain skills in a variety ⁵ _____ field research methods, or hear about other research topics ⁶ _____ guest speakers.

⁷ _____ surprising number and diversity of birds, amphibians, small mammals and other wildlife live alongside the 8.2 million human residents of New York City. In the greater metropolitan area, extending roughly 100 miles from Manhattan ⁸ _____ every direction, the diversity of plants and animals is ⁹ _____ more extensive. The research team will guide you as you investigate the plants and animals in the metropolitan region's protected areas, and learn ¹⁰ _____ conditions they need to survive. With ¹¹ _____ than half of the world's population living in cities, understanding the health of the environment in urban areas has ¹² _____ been more important. The data you help gather ¹³ _____ assist regional planners ¹⁴ _____ protecting urban nature and wildlife, and will help scientists to better understand how and ¹⁵ _____ urbanisation affects animals and plants.

Behind the scenes at the Royal Shakespeare Company

In collaboration with the Costume Department, the costume supervisor and designer decide ¹ _____ the best way to create the costumes for a new production. ² _____ may include the shoes, hats, armour, underwear, jewellery, buying the fabrics, booking the costume makers and setting ³ _____ the costume fittings.

To create ⁴ _____ particular period feel, neutral fabrics often arrive direct ⁵ _____ the factory to be treated by the Dyeing Department. Fifty percent of costumes are broken down in ⁶ _____ way to look worn or to show general wear and tear. Common tools of the trade for the department include a cheese grater, sandpaper, Stanley knives, a blowtorch, emulsion-based paints and fabric paints.

⁷ _____ the beginning of rehearsals all the actors' measurements ⁸ _____ taken. The Armoury and Boot Department make, recycle or adapt boots and shoes for a production. The Hats and Millinery team create a particular look using a wide variety ⁹ _____ materials.

Hairdressing, wigs and make-up complete ¹⁰ _____ final look. An actor often uses their own hair in a production. The Wigs team may ¹¹ _____ to cut, curl, dye or add extensions or hairpieces to an actor's hair.

¹² _____ specialist make-up is required, most actors apply their own make-up. The team creates blood effects for daggers, blood bags or smearing using glucose and fruit colouring. Black treacle is used ¹³ _____ darken the blood. The team may ¹⁴ _____ be required to make artificial parts of the body ¹⁵ _____ as the nose in Cyrano de Bergerac.

TASK 4

Slow Food

The Slow Food movement began about 20 years ago when farmers and foodies got together to promote and support traditional local production methods and to introduce ¹ _____ to an audience who wanted ² _____ same, pure, natural products. No growth stimulants, no steroids, no impurities, just old-style food, produced at the speed of Mother Nature. ³ _____ the support of Slow Food, many artisan producers, growers and fishermen would ⁴ _____ had to cease production and amazing flavour sensations would have been lost. Isn't this ⁵ _____ many people say they want in Britain? Fewer miles, more local produce?

The movement has grown worldwide – slowly, obviously – and has become a huge, complex organisation – 85,000 members in 132 countries according ⁶ _____ their website – but even ⁷ _____ it very much represents the interests of the new generation of quality farmers and producers, it hasn't caught ⁸ _____ so well in the UK.

Is it seen ⁹ _____ too specialist or elitist? Is it because we have ¹⁰ _____ many food-based TV programmes that ¹¹ _____ is already plenty of exposure for artisan producers without Slow Food?

Personally, I think this devotion ¹² _____ quality in food and wine could reach ¹³ _____ bigger audience in the UK. It's not ¹⁴ _____ the Slow Food movement isn't spreading but perhaps it needs to be a bit ¹⁵ _____ dynamic in the UK to capture the public imagination.

TASK 5

The temperature of feelings

Holding a hot drink makes you feel more positive towards a stranger than if you were holding an ice-cold drink, according to a study that has found a link ¹ _____ physical and emotional warmth.

Scientists tested the idea ² _____ giving volunteers either hot or cold drinks to hold before interviewing them about their feelings. The volunteers consistently displayed warmer emotions ³ _____ holding the hot drink.

The researchers then went ⁴ _____ to study the effects of warm and cold objects and found similar results, indicating that ⁵ _____ was not the drink as such ⁶ _____ the physical temperature of the object ⁷ _____ held.

'It appears that the effect ⁸ _____ physical temperature is not just on ⁹ _____ we see others, it affects our own behaviour as well. Physical warmth can make us see others as warmer people, but also causes us to be warmer, more generous and trusting ¹⁰ _____ well,' said John Bargh, Professor of Psychology at Yale University.

Volunteers in the study, published in the journal Science, did not know why they ¹¹ _____ given a hot or cold drink to hold – they were simply asked to do it – and ¹² _____ the findings indicate that there is a deep psychological reason why physical temperature is linked to emotional feelings.

The findings suggest ¹³ _____ warm drinks or snacks could make someone more trusting ¹⁴ _____ others, which could be exploited by companies on the lookout for new marketing tools. So beware the sales person who gives you a warm cookie ¹⁵ _____ a cold day.

TASK 6

Shedding light on dark matter

About 85 percent is neither stars ⁴ _____ planets but some form of mysterious matter. It cannot be seen or detected by conventional scientific instruments, which is ⁵ _____ the precise nature of this 'dark matter' has eluded the finest minds in science. Now cosmologists believe the problem will ⁶ _____ solved within two years, thanks to the results of a vast computer simulation of the Milky Way galaxy that has provided the first cosmic map of where dark matter ⁷ _____ be found and how to find it.

The simulation predicts ⁸ _____ there are regions near the centre of the Milky Way ⁹ _____ dark matter will emit a glow of powerful gamma radiation, which could be detected ¹⁰ _____ a NASA satellite launched this year specifically to search for this type of cosmic ray.

Powerful supercomputers ¹¹ _____ have modelled all known aspects of dark matter predict that a set of hitherto undiscovered sub-atomic particles must account ¹² _____ the 85 percent of the matter in the universe that is missing ¹³ _____ view.

The simulation predicts that in regions near the centre of our galaxy ¹⁴ _____ sub-atomic particles become tightly packed so they collide, and ¹⁵ _____ the process emit a gamma ray glow that should be detectable by the Fermi telescope, the latest satellite observatory to be launched by NASA.

The Focus series provides practice of the tasks found in upper secondary leaving exams as well as international exams like PET or the Cambridge English exams (FCE and CAE), Trinity and PTE (Pearson Test of English). Focus 5 is specifically aimed at those who are planning to take the Cambridge Advanced English exam (CAE). Both Student's Books and Workbooks include activities which will help you prepare for all the parts of a typical exam – Listening, Reading, Use of English, Writing and Speaking. In addition, in this section you will find some useful tips to help you confidently approach different types of exam tasks.

Listening

General guidelines

Do

- Before listening to a recording, read the instructions and questions in the task carefully. Try to predict what kind of information you're going to hear (e.g. how many speakers there could be, what words/expressions they might use, etc.).
- When listening for the first time, look at the questions in the task again and note down your answers.
- Before listening to the recording the second time, read all the questions again, especially those you didn't answer the first time. Note down your new answers and check your answers from the first time you listened.

Don't

- Don't worry if you don't understand some words. You don't need to understand all of the recording to do the task.
- If you don't understand a part of the text at first, don't give up listening! Remember: there will be another chance to listen and your understanding of other parts of the recording will help you the second time.
- Don't spend too much time on the questions which you don't know how to answer. You'll be able to come back to them later. Move on to the next question.
- Don't leave any questions unanswered. If you are not sure, guess!

Multiple-choice questions

- In this type of task you answer questions by choosing one of three or four provided responses. The questions require you to listen for different elements such as feeling, attitude, opinion, course of action, speaker's intentions, gist, detail, etc.
- Remember that the questions in the task are usually given in the same order as the information in the recording.
- When listening to the recording for the first time, note down your own answers to the questions. Then compare them to the options provided in the task and choose the ones which are closest in meaning to yours.
- Be careful of answers which sound very similar to the information in the recording. They are often wrong. Pay attention to synonyms and antonyms.
- The information needed to answer the question is often not presented directly in the recording – you need to work it out based on what you've heard.

- Sometimes when you're answering a question or questions about a conversation, you need to remember to listen for the right speaker. The other options may be mentioned, but not by the person you are asked about.
- If you're not sure which option to choose, use the method of elimination: start by crossing out the answers which are definitely wrong, then those you think are probably wrong, until you are left with only one option.

Multiple matching

- In this task type you are expected to match the speakers to the right answers. It tests your ability to listen for such elements as gist, attitude, opinion, main points, the speaker's intentions and feeling and interpreting context.
- If you need to identify a speaker or place in the task, listen for typical expressions related to people or places. Sometimes one characteristic phrase can help you to choose the right answer.
- Remember that other speakers might mention words or opinions connected to the point or comment you are looking for, but it will not be exactly right. Don't be distracted or misled.
- Sometimes it can help to listen to the recordings before you read through the options. Then you have an idea of what the speaker is saying without confusion or preconceptions. Think about the best strategy for you.

Sentence completion

- This type of task requires you to listen for information to complete some sentences. Usually, this will require no more than a couple of words. You will definitely hear the words that you need to write in the recording, but the rest of the sentence on your exam sheet will not be identical. It will be rephrased.
- If you need to write a common word, you will be expected to spell it correctly.
- Read all the sentences carefully before you listen for the first time so that you have an idea of what the recording is about. This helps when you are trying to identify the section that has the information you need.
- Try to predict from the sentences what sort of words or information you need to listen for. You might be able to guess that you need to listen for a date, a name, etc.
- Be careful about distractions in the recording. Sometimes if you think you need to listen for a date or year, there could be another date or year mentioned before or afterwards, but it will not fit the context of your sentence.

Reading

General guidelines

Do

- Before reading the text, read the instructions for the task carefully. The task will affect the way you read the text.
- Try to identify the kind of text which is used in the task. This can help you predict what sort of information to expect.

- Use the hints in the text to help you understand the context. The title and any photos or other visuals will help you identify the main topic, and the first sentences of paragraphs often summarise their content.
- Read the text quickly to check if your predictions about its content were right. This will also help you later when identifying the parts of the text where the answers are.
- Underline the parts of the text which contain language relevant to the questions (e.g. phrases, sentences, paragraphs).

Don't

- Don't try to understand every word in a text. You don't need to know every single word to do the task. You can try to guess the meaning of unknown words using different techniques (e.g. guessing from the context or the grammatical form, noticing similarities to words in your language).
- Don't leave any questions unanswered. If you are not sure, guess!
- Don't spend too much time on any one particular task. Remember that time in the exam is limited and you should try to do all of the tasks.

Multiple-choice questions

- In this task type you need to answer questions about a text by choosing one of four options provided. This task tests your ability to read for detail, opinion, tone, purpose, main idea, implication or attitude.
- Look at the title of the text and try to think what genre it represents. Then read the text to see if your assumption is right. Only then look at the main parts of the questions without reading the answers provided. Thanks to this approach you are less likely to be misled by incorrect options.
- Identify the parts of the text which the questions refer to. Remember that these could differ in length (between one word/phrase and a whole paragraph).
- Focus on the detail of a paragraph or sentence. An incorrect answer might only differ from the correct one in elements such as the tense used or information given that only partly matches the text.
- Remember the words in the correct option will not be the same as those in the text. There will be synonym use and rephrasing.
- Don't be distracted by options that use similar wording. Only one option will be exactly what you need.
- Eliminate the answers which you feel sure are wrong, then make your final choice.

Matching tasks: gapped text, multiple matching, cross-text multiple matching

- The gapped text task requires candidates to match missing paragraphs with gaps in a text. Remember that this type of task includes an extra option, so you will have to eliminate an unnecessary item.

- When you match missing paragraphs with gaps in the text, skim the text first, ignoring the gaps, to get its general meaning. Then try to choose the missing information to complete the text, paying special attention to the words that come before and after the gaps.
- It can be useful to look at reference words in the missing paragraph and the sentences before and after the gap. A pronoun in the option may refer back to a person in the previous sentence. Pay special attention to linking devices signalling sequence (firstly, secondly, etc.), time (then, finally, etc.), contrast (on the other hand, however, etc.) or result/consequence (thus, hence, etc.) and the like.
- Start by matching the paragraphs you are sure of even if that means they will not be inserted in the top to bottom order. This will limit the number of options and allow you to concentrate on the more difficult excerpts.
- The multiple matching task requires you to match items of information with the texts or sections of a text in which they can be found. It is important to be able to scan the texts quickly to find the matching information.
- Remember that the information will be rephrased in the items, so don't look for the same words.
- Remember the same text may be chosen more than once.
- The cross-text multiple matching task concentrates on comparing and contrasting information from several texts whose content is very similar. For this reason it is a very demanding task as it requires you to concentrate on both detail and the overall meaning of the whole text.
- Once you identify the text where the information you are looking for is included, compare it with information in other texts to be sure the meaning is in fact alike or different, whichever is required in the task.
- Remember, texts can also be chosen more than once.

Use of English

General guidelines

Do

- Before you start doing the task, read the instructions. The task will affect the way you read the text/sentences.
- When a text has a title, read it carefully as this can help you predict the main idea of the text.
- Where there are gaps in the text, read it through completely, not worrying about the gaps, to get the general idea.

Don't

- Don't try to understand every word in a text. You don't need to know every single word to do the task. You can try to guess the meaning of unknown words using different techniques (e.g. guessing from the context or the grammatical form, noticing similarities to words in your language).
- Don't leave any questions unanswered. If you are not sure, guess!
- Don't spend too much time on any one particular task. Remember that time in the exam is limited and you should try to do all of the tasks.

Multiple-choice cloze

- Read the text first to get an idea what each of its parts is about. Try to understand as much as you can while ignoring the gaps.
- Different types of vocabulary are tested in this task. For example, you may need to complete a phrasal verb, choose a correct linker or choose between words with similar meanings.
- Read the gap-fill options carefully before deciding which one to choose.
- When deciding which option to use to complete a gap, look at the words before and after the gap. They will give you clues about which option is correct (e.g. look for linkers, personal and object pronouns, adjectives and adverbs).
- Remember that the option you choose must fit grammatically into the sentence and must also have the correct meaning.
- When you've finished, always reread the text to see that it follows logically.

Open cloze

- Read the text first to get an idea what each of its parts is about. Try to understand as much as you can while ignoring the gaps.
- Different types of words and elements of grammar are tested in this exam task. For example, you may need to complete a phrasal verb or find a correct linker, article, auxiliary verb, etc.
- When deciding which word to use to complete a gap, look at the words before and after the gap. They will give you clues about what sort of word you are looking for.
- Remember that the word you choose must fit grammatically into the sentence and must also have the correct form and meaning.
- When you've finished, always reread the text to see that it follows logically.

Word formation

- Read the text first to get an idea what each of its parts is about. Try to understand as much as you can while ignoring the gaps.
- You need to think carefully about how to change the word so that it fits grammatically into the sentence – is it an adjective, an adverb, etc.? You should also consider the meaning – for example, do you need a negative or positive meaning?
- Remember that as well as adding prefixes and suffixes to a word, you may also need to make other changes.
- When you've finished, always reread the text to see that it follows logically.

Key word transformations

- Make sure you read the first sentence carefully and understand the meaning. The second sentence must be as close to that meaning as possible.
- When reading the second sentence, try to think what grammatical structure is being tested in it. Read the parts of the second sentence which you have to complete carefully as they will affect how you complete it. Look for any tense changes or whether you need a singular or plural verb, a negative or a question form, etc.
- Remember that there is a word limit (3-6 words). Always check your number of words since if you have more than the limit, it may mean that you've gone wrong somewhere. A contraction (e.g. don't) counts as two words, not one.
- When you've finished, always reread the sentence to check its grammatical correctness and spelling.

Writing

General guidelines

In the CAE exam you will be asked to write two pieces of written English. Exam tasks include writing a proposal, a review, a report, an essay with a discursive focus, a letter or an email. There is a word limit of between 220 and 260 words. When writing any of the above mentioned texts, you will need to recognise the function of the piece of writing you have been asked to write and use appropriate and relevant key language in it. To help you do this, we have provided a reference section in this Workbook (FUNCTION PHRASE BANK, pages 126-130).

Do

- Analyse carefully what kind of writing task it is. Note down the most characteristic features of the text type required in the task in bullet points before you start writing.
- Read all the information that you need to include carefully. Also, write down useful words, phrases or grammatical structures that might be relevant to the information.
- Write a plan detailing the information you want to include in each paragraph. If you have time, write some key sentences too.
- Check that you have included all the information required in your writing. Remember to use linkers so that your writing is coherent and easy to follow.
- Check the style of your writing and make sure it's appropriate to the task (e.g. have you used formal or informal language as required?).
- Check that you have an introduction, a main body and a conclusion in your writing, that your paragraphs are clearly defined and that you have written an appropriate number of words.
- Finally, check your grammar and spelling.

Don't

- Don't go over the word limit. It's better to estimate the number of words while you are writing, then shorten or extend your text, than to cross out half of the text when it's already finished. Think about the number of words you need for each paragraph when you're writing your plan.
- Try not to repeat the same information. By doing this, you will waste time and a lot of words from the word count for the piece.
- Try not to use the same words and phrases more than once. Use a range of vocabulary and grammatical structures.
- Don't use incomplete sentences looking like notes. To write a coherent text, you need to use full sentences and include linkers and subordinate clauses.

Speaking

General guidelines

When preparing for the oral part of an exam, you will need to understand the function of the speaking task you are being asked to take part in. The FUNCTION PHRASE BANK (pages 131-133) will help you prepare systematically for oral exam tasks.

Do

- Listen carefully to the examiner's questions. Often the questions will be written on your exam sheet.
- Try to stick to the aim of the task. Always keep the question in mind when answering.
- When you are not sure whether you have understood what the examiner has said, ask them to repeat the question.
- If you need more time to decide what to say, ask the interlocutor to repeat the question and then repeat or paraphrase it. Then use 'filler' phrases giving you time to think (e.g. Let me think ..., It's difficult to say ...).
- Remember that the examiner has a time limit for each part of the exam. If they stop you while you're speaking, it's because you have spoken for longer than necessary.
- Try to keep speaking rather than finishing your talk or discussion early. It is better to be interrupted because you're talking too much than to say too little.
- Make sure you keep in mind that your partner needs to speak as well! Try not to speak too much so that you dominate the conversation or that you speak too little and don't give the examiner enough language to assess.
- When you are asked to discuss something with your partner, make sure you interact by asking for their opinion. Don't take it in turns to give your ideas. It should be a real conversation.

Don't

- Don't ask the examiner to explain something. They can only repeat an instruction.
- Try not to repeat the same phrases over and over. Show that you can use a range of vocabulary and grammatical structures.
- If you can't remember a word, don't panic! Try to use strategies that will help you communicate what you want to say (e.g. use a word with a similar meaning or describe the notion or idea you are trying to communicate).
- Don't try to learn whole sentences or detailed answers to things you think you might be asked about. Speak and respond as naturally as possible.
- Never give up! Even if you didn't perform well in the first task or part of it, it's possible you will do much better in the part which is left. Believe in yourself and your English!
