Restless pursuer of luxury's future

by Vanessa Friedman

Sydney Toledano (Dior's Chief Executive) is one of the longest-serving chief executives in the luxury industry. As the industry goes global, he must balance the demands of shareholders and the values of a historic label, the need for exclusivity and the need for expansion.

He routinely communicates with his demanding boss, Bernard Arnault, main shareholder of Christian Dior, and a number of creative types, including Dior's clothes designer John Galliano and jewellery designer Victoire de Castellane.

'The best advice I ever got was that, when times are bad, you need to get out of the office; when things are good, you can spend time on the organisation,' says Mr Toledano, who travels almost every week to one of Dior's 224 stores round the world. 'You have to look for newness, look for what is happening next. Forget the calculator. Understand the people from different countries and what they want.'

It was by spending time in China in the 1980s, for example, when he worked at the French leather-goods house Lancel, that Mr Toledano first realised China would one day be prime territory for luxury.

'I met some factory owners, and they were working so hard, but then they would bring you to a restaurant and it was clear they wanted to enjoy life,' he says. 'And I thought: one day these people are going to have money and they are going to spend it.'

A few years later, Bernard Arnault contacted him. 'The interview took 15 minutes. He knew exactly what he wanted,' says Mr Toledano: to take a small couture house he had bought out of bankruptcy and build it into the biggest luxury group in the world. Mr Arnault has used Dior to create LVMH (Louis Vuitton Moët Hennessy, the world's largest luxury group).

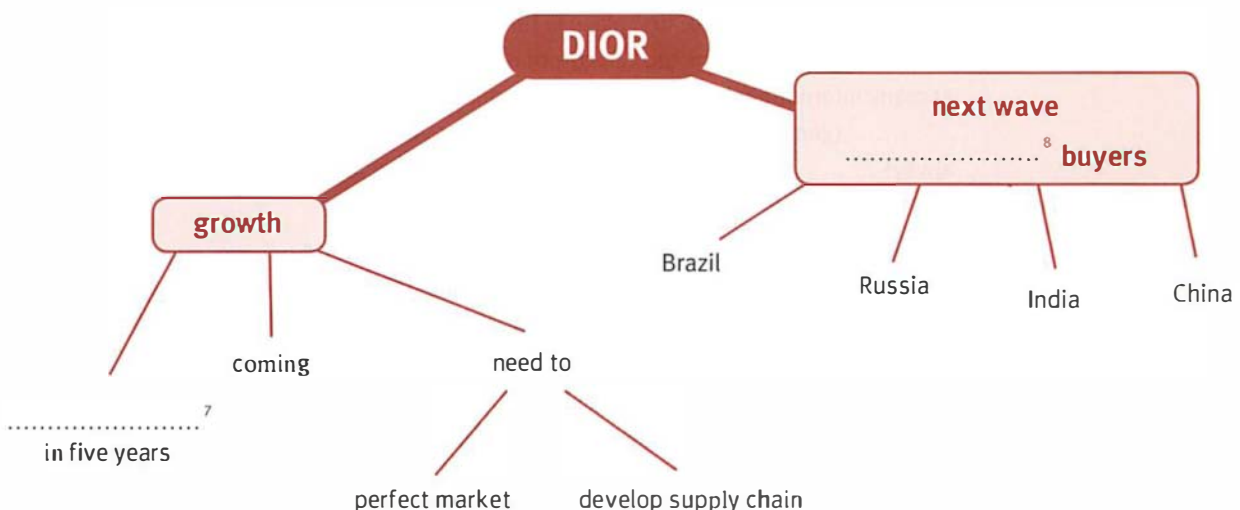

'Christian Dior can double in five years,' he says. 'There may be difficult times coming, but if you look at the Middle East, China, even Europe, I believe there is growth coming, and we have to develop our network and perfect our supply chain.'

The next wave of luxury buyers is now in the new territories: the Middle East, Russia, Hong Kong and South Korea.

Sydney Toledano, CEO Dior

Mr Toledano believes not only that a brand should go to its customers but that it should anticipate their needs and invest early in markets that may not show real growth for up to six years.

HUDSON CORPORATION

A luxury luggage manufacturer is facing increased competition from cheaper imports. It must decide how to protect its brand and create new markets for its products.

Background

Hudson Corporation, based in New Jersey, USA, makes top-of-the-range luggage and travel accessories. It is a well-known brand name in the USA. Its suitcases and bags are associated with high quality, traditional design and craftsmanship. Hudson emphasises in its advertising that its products are 'made in America'. Recently, the company's market share in the USA has decreased. One reason for this has been the increased competition from Asian companies selling similar products at much lower prices.

A year ago, the management decided to boost sales by entering the European market, focusing initially on Switzerland, Germany, France and Italy. They set up a branch office and warehouse facility in Zurich, which would be the base for their European expansion.

What problems do you think Hudson will face on entering the European market? Make a list of your ideas.

Market research

Hudson recently set up a series of focus groups to find out how consumers perceived the company's brand in the USA.

Which of the findings do you think may have contributed to the company's lower market share in its home market?

Do you think Hudson's luggage and bags are:	% of people answering 'yes' expensive?	72
exclusive?	56
value for money?	48
good quality?	82
old-fashioned?	68
exciting?	15
innovative?	18

CD 1.6 Four of Hudson's American managers are talking about the problems they could face in Europe. Listen and make notes on the key points.

MARKETING STRATEGIES FOR EUROPE – OPTIONS

Reposition the brand

Sell Hudson suitcases and bags at medium price ranges. Manufacture the products in a country where labour costs are low, e.g. India or China. Do not promote the products as 'Made in America'. Use a high-volume, low-cost strategy for Hudson's core products.

Develop the Hudson brand

Promote the Hudson products as an exclusive brand and keep the 'Made in America' tag. Sell the products in the higher price ranges. Use product placement in films and television to support the brand. Hire a famous, sophisticated, influential man and woman to endorse the products. Two well-known French film stars have shown interest in endorsing a new range.

Hire a top designer

Employ a top designer to produce a new range of smaller suitcases and shoulder bags aimed at businesspeople travelling in Europe and at rich, younger, fashion-conscious buyers. Sell the products under a new label.

Develop a wider product range

Sell a wider range of products under the Hudson label, e.g. trolley-backpacks, document cases, briefcases, name-card holders, shoulder bags for men and women. Sell at lower, competitive prices.

Stretch the Hudson brand

Put the Hudson brand on high-quality watches and jewellery. Make an agreement with the Swiss manufacturers of these top-of-the-range products.

Develop sales using e-commerce

Sell the existing product lines via the Internet at very competitive prices.

Task

- 1 Work in small groups as directors of the Hudson Corporation. Hold an informal meeting. Consider the advantages and disadvantages of each option listed above. Choose two of the marketing strategies which Hudson should focus on to expand sales in European markets.
- 2 Meet as one group and decide which two marketing strategies you will use to develop sales in European markets.

Writing

As the CEO of Hudson Corporation, write an e-mail to the head of European Marketing Associates, David Wright, summarising the actions you agreed to take at your meeting, with your reasons. Suggest a time for a meeting with David Wright and his associates.

Counting the ways to bridge the gulf

by Jill James

As more carriers open up more routes, travelling to and around the Middle East has never been easier.

Edmond Moutran, the 63-year-old Chairman and Chief Executive of Memac Ogilvy & Mather, the multinational advertising and communications company, should know. The Lebanese executive reckons he spends 60% of his working week in the air. 'I spend 200 days in Beirut, 40 days in Dubai, 40 days in Bahrain and 25 in the UK. I also spend one week in each of Cairo, Jordan, Jeddah, Riyadh, Kuwait, Tunis and Algeria. I go to South Africa once a year, Barcelona once or twice a year for conferences and I go to Paris four times a year.'

He says his choice of airline is dictated by convenience, but his preference is for Middle East Airlines and its 'new aircraft and equipment, and well-trained, fresh and energetic staff'. His second choice is Gulf Air, with Emirates third, followed by British Airways and Air France.

He always travels with his wife, Liliane, who worked with him until very recently, and prefers to travel first class. He also uses business class. He says he will travel economy 'in an emergency'.

He uses airline lounges. 'I want good chairs, plenty of newspapers and television. Airlines that spend millions on décor and have uncomfortable chairs really need to look at themselves.'

'MEA gets me a car to the airport and they open a special counter for me as an individual,' he says. 'Staff take your boarding pass, check you in and walk you through to the lounge. The airline saves me about an hour of standing in line. It shows real respect. You don't really get this extra-special treatment on other airlines. With MEA, it's the whole process – that's why I'm so loyal to them.'

So what annoys him most about flying? 'The attitude of crew and staff sometimes,' he says. 'If they're tired of their jobs, they should give it up. I also dislike the casual attitude of ground staff. Employees should be trained to cope with customers who have problems.'

Mr Moutran says that problems with ground staff are one of the reasons he hates travelling to the US. 'No one ever has time to answer a question there,' he says. He also doesn't like the lack of openness shown by airlines when there are problems and delays.

BUSINESS TRAVEL SERVICES

Stage 1

The Head of Travel at NeoTech phones the Account Manager of BTS to set up a meeting, so that they can discuss the problems that executives have had while on business trips.

In pairs, role-play the telephone conversation to set up the meeting.

Student A:

You are Head of Travel at NeoTech. Turn to page 135 to read the information in your diary and check when you are available for a meeting.

Student B:

You are the Account Manager for BTS. Turn to page 140 to read the information in your diary and check when you are available for a meeting.

Stage 2

NeoTech's Head of Travel phones BTS's Account Manager to change the time of the meeting. Some equipment has been stolen from their office, and the police are investigating. The Head of Travel suggests meeting in two weeks' time on a Wednesday.

BTS's Account Manager cannot meet on the Wednesday – he/she is giving a speech at an international travel conference. He/She suggests an alternative day and time.

Role-play the telephone conversation.

Stage 3

Following a request from BTS's Account Manager, NeoTech's Head of Travel sends summaries of four problems which senior executives at NeoTech had during recent business trips (see page 21).

Hotel Problem

Last Thursday, I checked into the Excelsior Hotel. The receptionist told me I had been upgraded and my room was on the 16th floor. Well, I stayed there for an hour or so, then asked to move to another room. The 'upgraded' room had no safe for my money, and the lighting was very bad. Also, there was a group of noisy people next door.

The new room was no better. I couldn't take a shower because there was no water for four hours. The coffee machine didn't work, the ice machine was out of order and the desk was too small. I called the receptionist to get some action, but she seemed too busy to do anything.

This hotel simply isn't up to standard. What can you do about it for me?

Lost Luggage

Three months ago, I travelled to Atlanta, Georgia. Two pieces of luggage didn't arrive. I reported the loss to the airline. They promised to find the bags and send them to me. Some weeks later, they wrote saying they couldn't find the bags and asked me to fill out a claim form. I didn't hear from them for another month, then they asked me to send receipts for all the missing articles. I didn't have receipts for the lost items.

It's three months later, and still no news from the airline. My e-mails and letters get no response. The airline has recently merged with another company, and I wonder if this is part of the problem. Can you help?

Car Rental Problem

The rental office at the airport couldn't give me the car I had reserved. It was in the medium price range at $250 a week. Instead, they offered me a choice:

- a smaller car, which was uncomfortable and had a small trunk;
- a bigger car for an extra $20 a day.

I was expecting a free upgrade, but the clerk on the desk refused to do that. His attitude was 'take it or leave it'. So I hired the bigger car. When the company billed me, I ended up paying $490 for the car.

Diverted Flight

I was on a flight to Moscow, but the flight was diverted to Helsinki because of bad weather. There was a lot of confusion at Helsinki because the airline sent all the passengers to the same hotel for the night. Some passengers became very aggressive when they tried to get a room. I had to share a room with another passenger. The hotel made all passengers pay for their rooms. The next morning, we had to wait six hours in a cold terminal for the flight to Moscow.

The airline wouldn't pay for our hotel expenses. They said the circumstances were 'beyond their control'. I think we should be compensated for all the inconvenience.

Task

Work in groups of four. One of you is BTS's Account Manager, the other three are travel consultants who work with the Account Manager.

- 1 Each member of the group (Account Manager/travel consultants) reads one of the problems above and makes notes about it.
- 2 Each person summarises the problem for his/her colleagues, and answers any questions they may have.
- 3 After each summary, the groups discuss the following:
 - Did the executive in each case deal with the problem effectively? Why? / Why not?
 - What can BTS do to help to solve the problem?
 - What is the best solution for each executive? What, if anything, should he/she hope to get from the company concerned?

Writing

As the Account Manager for BTS, write an e-mail to NeoTech's Head of Travel, apologising for the inconvenience. Offer some compensation and explain what steps BTS has taken to make sure a similar problem does not happen again.

Mercedes star twinkles once more

by Richard Milne

The Mercedes star is gleaming again. In 2002, it suffered as dramatic a fall as any luxury brand could, as it reported its first losses for nearly two decades and saw its quality slip so far that newspapers were full of stories of cars that kept on breaking down.

'Mercedes should not make losses. That is absolutely clear,' says Dieter Zetsche, who became Head of Mercedes in September 2005 and Chief Executive of its parent company, Daimler, three months later. 'But we have great results now and we are starting to change the culture in many ways.'

Indeed, so much has Mercedes changed that in three years it has gone from the worst-performing of the large luxury car makers to the trailblazer. Executives at its bigger-selling rival BMW look enviously at its 9.1-per-cent return on sales last year (and even more so at the 10.4 per cent it made in the fourth quarter – compared with BMW's 5.4 per cent in the third quarter).

Much of that turnaround is due to Mr Zetsche, famous for his walrus moustache. He was not the first automotive executive to take on two jobs, but he has been one of the most successful with it, using his operational experience at Mercedes to help him at Daimler. Mr Zetsche says that combining roles is essential for his management style. He is also keen to stress that Mercedes has a team approach.

Mr Zetsche was hard from the outset, cutting 14,500 jobs – 8,500 in production and 6,000 administrative staff. That broke the pattern of Mercedes providing a job for life to workers. But it had a dramatic effect on the bottom line. Mr Zetsche says: 'Productivity gains don't get you anything if you don't reduce personnel.' Mercedes' recent success is also linked to a big improvement in its product quality and the launch of some well-praised models, headed by the new C-Class saloon. 'Mercedes is building cars that people want to buy again and, for once, they even look better than BMWs,' says one London-based analyst.

The debate on reducing carbon-dioxide emissions could hit Mercedes hard. But the company, for now, is choosing to highlight the launch of 20 fuel-efficient models this year.

All of this has put a spring back in the step of a company that, in Mr Zetsche's words, also acts as a 'mirror on German society'. It has also restored lustre to Mr Zetsche's star, which was tarnished by the poor performance of Chrysler, the US car maker that was owned by Daimler.

READING

Mercedes, shining star

A Read the first two paragraphs quickly and decide if the statements are true (T) or false (F), according to the article.

- 6 jealously
- 7 a complete change from a bad situation to a good one
- 8 the financial result of a company's business (i.e. profit or loss)

C Without looking back at the article, try to match the words to form common word partnerships.

- | | |

| 1 luxury | a) executive |
| 2 chief | b) models |
| 3 parent | c) effect |
| 4 fourth | d) company |
| 5 management | e) brand |

D You are managers of a retail fashion chain called Young Scene, with stores in most major European cities. You are holding your regular management meeting. Use the CEO's notes below as an agenda for your discussions. A different person should chair each item.

Briefing notes

1 Performance-related pay

Following changes to the bonus system, sales staff in stores now receive monthly bonuses according to their individual sales. Unfortunately, while the new system is popular with staff, it has led to many complaints from customers about sales staff 'fighting' over customers in order to secure sales and therefore bonuses. Is the system making staff too competitive?

2 Stock control

Managers at many outlets are reporting problems with the system of organising and finding items for customers in the stock rooms. This is causing delays and causing frustration for both staff and customers. The main question seems to be how to organise the stock – by size, by style or by colour?

3 Shoplifting

Following a recent increase in shoplifting, Young Scene now employs security guards in all its stores. There has been a number of complaints from customers that they find the guards intimidating. This is starting to affect sales, although shoplifting itself is also down. What can be done about this issue?

4 Carbon footprint

In line with its philosophy as a 'green' company, it has been suggested that Young Scene should be reducing its carbon footprint, meaning that air travel should be kept to a minimum. Buyers and managers would in future travel by train within Europe. Outside Europe, they would use economy class or budget air travel only. Is this practical or indeed desirable?

5 End of clothing allowance

Sales staff in stores currently receive a clothing allowance, which takes the form of a 50% discount on Young Scene clothes, which staff then must wear at work. One suggestion is to cut this to 10%, or stop this completely and introduce a compulsory company uniform.

6 Staff meetings

The current practice is to open all stores two hours later one day a week in order for the store manager to hold a meeting with all staff. It has been suggested that this meeting be held after hours in future to maximise opening hours.

How can an international media group integrate the new Hong Kong-based company it has recently merged with?

Background

Last March, readers of an Asia-Pacific business magazine, Investor International, were given information about an Australian company, the Decker Group.

COMPANY PROFILE

Company: Decker Group
Located: Sydney, Australia
Workforce: 35,000
Turnover: A$4.6bn

Main activities

Decker is a diversified media group with interests in broadcasting, entertainment and Internet services.

Recent developments

Decker has recently merged with a Hong Kong-based media company, Asia Entertainment. In a press release, the deal was described as a merger, but Decker is the real decision-maker.

Reasons for Decker's acquisition

- 1 Decker will expand its presence in a dynamic new market, China.
- 2 It will use Asia Entertainment for further expansion into Asian markets such as Singapore, Malaysia and Vietnam.
- 3 Asia Entertainment has a growing online presence through its successful DVD viewing service

Comment

Asia Entertainment seems to be a good fit with the Decker Group. However, there may be problems when a different style of management, the 'Australian way of doing things', is introduced into the Asian company.

The new Chairman and Chief Executive will be Scott Henderson. A graduate from the Harvard School of Business, Scott Henderson has a reputation for being a strong leader who is not afraid to take difficult decisions. He is a fluent speaker of Mandarin Chinese.

 CD1.18 Scott Henderson, the new Chief Executive, gave an interview to a Hong Kong TV business channel. He was asked about the recent acquisition of Asian Entertainment. Listen and note what he says.

Problems

It is now a year later. The change of ownership and new management style at Asia Entertainment have caused many problems. The e-mail on the right illustrates some of the difficulties.

To: Robert Crawford, Vice-President
From: Cindy Chow, Director, Human Resources
Subject: Effects of the merger

Staff are very unhappy about the changes. I'm worried about the high staff turnover and low morale. These are some of the reasons for the problems.

1 Re-applying for positions

The management has asked all employees to re-apply for their jobs. Staff feel very uneasy and insecure. People do not want to compete against each other for jobs.

2 Redundancies

Redundancies are expected. Employees in HR and Sales feel particularly threatened. Many employees from these departments are looking for new jobs, which is affecting productivity.

3 Compensation

Staff are already being made redundant. However, the compensation package is poor. They are also receiving no help to find new jobs.

4 English language skills

The management has insisted that all staff must improve their English, but no financial help has been offered towards the cost of English courses.

5 Management style

These are typical comments made by staff.

- They're trying to do things too fast – there's a new computer system we don't understand; and they're ordering lots of Australian films for our rental service, but we know nothing about the films.
- They want an informal atmosphere, but we don't want to use first names – we're not used to that.
- The food in the staff restaurant is awful. The new manager's Australian, she's changed most of the dishes. We have to eat a lot of food we're not used to. There are too many dairy products and not enough fresh vegetables and fish.
- Most of the management jobs have been given to Australians. There are not many Chinese in senior positions – everyone's complaining about it.
- We don't know what's going on. We don't know where the company is going and what our strategy is. Quite a few of us don't know who our boss is, or what our duties are.
- We feel we're losing our Chinese identity. Our bosses don't understand us, our customs are so different. Our new managers are only interested in results.

Task

A group of senior managers meets to resolve the problems.

1 Work in two groups.

Group A: new Australian managers led by Scott Henderson

1 Brands

VOCABULARY

Complete the text with the correct words.

Topalino is a well-known brand of sweets and chocolates owned by ABG, a company based in Maribor, Slovenia. It focuses mainly on¹ products and was the market² in exclusive confectionery.

In the last two years, however, Topalino's market³ has declined by almost 25%. There are at least two reasons for this decline.

First, supermarkets in the region are now selling sweets of similar quality at much lower prices, so more and more consumers say that Topalino is no longer⁴ for money. The economic downturn has naturally made people more price conscious, and brand⁵ is suffering as a result. A possible solution would be to reduce the price of at least a number of products so that they are in the medium⁶ of prices.

Secondly, a lot of middle-aged people find the logo childish and the packaging old-fashioned and unexciting – in other words, they no longer find the brand⁷ attractive. In order to appeal to this important market⁸, Topalino is thinking of⁹ its main products and expanding its product¹⁰.

Success can be a game with many players

by Sarah Murray

One of the side effects of the free food for Google staff is what is known as the 'Google 15' – the number of pounds that employees typically gain after joining the Internet company. But whether it is providing snacks and gourmet meals in the canteen, annual skiing trips or games rooms at the office, the philosophy behind such perks is the same – getting staff to meet each other, interact in informal settings and encourage teamwork.

One way the company does this is to hold competitions in everything, from office decorating to dancing and football, with prizes for the winners. Managers also receive a quarterly 'celebratory fund' either to reward accomplishments or to build teamwork by going bowling, go-karting or dining out.

The Best Workplaces survey indicates that such initiatives have a powerful effect. At Google Italy, for example, 90 per cent of the employees agreed that 'people celebrate special events around here'.

Also in Italy, 100 per cent agreed that 'this is a friendly place to work' and 96 per cent agreed that 'there is a "family" or "team" feeling here'.

Another part of Google's objective is to make its workplace feel fun. Massage chairs, table-tennis tables, video games, lava lamps, hammocks, beanbags, bicycles, large rubber balls, couches and scooters are all part of the furniture in Google offices.

However, when it comes to the serious business of work, great emphasis is placed on engaging employees. 'What makes Google a great workplace is that the nature of the work itself is very challenging and interesting,' says Nick Creswell, the company's university programmes manager for Europe, the Middle East and Africa. 'And for the type of people who really enjoy an intellectual challenge, that's the biggest appeal of working here.'

Fostering this intellectual activity is a policy giving employees a large degree of independence in deciding how to work – both in terms of the hours they work and how they do their jobs. 'There's a real culture of autonomy and empowerment,' says Mr Creswell. 'Individuals within the business understand what their own goals are within the context of their teams, and they have a lot of freedom to go out and make those happen.'

Even when it comes to learning and development, many programmes are voluntary and informal. Often it may be a case of inviting university faculty in to discuss their latest research. Google also invites prominent writers to give lunchtime talks about their books.

D Match these nouns from the article (1–5) to their meanings (a–e).

- | | |
|---------------------------------|--|
| 1 accomplishments (paragraph 2) | a) important new plans to achieve an aim |
| 2 initiatives (paragraph 3) | b) success in doing something |
| 3 autonomy (paragraph 6) | c) giving people the power to do something |
| 4 empowerment (paragraph 6) | d) teaching staff |
| 5 faculty (paragraph 7) | e) independence/freedom to make your own decisions |

E Discuss these questions.

- Would you like to work in a company like Google? Why? / Why not?
- Would Google's philosophy work in your organisation? Why? / Why not?
- Which of the perks or ideas mentioned in the article appeals to you the most?

InStep's relocation

A US-based shoe manufacturer must decide whether to relocate the head office of its European subsidiary, InStep, from Paris to a small industrial town 120 kilometres away.

Background

Three years ago, InStep moved its factory to Beauchamp, a small, industrial town in northern France. The plant is modern with new equipment. A large warehouse and distribution centre were built near the factory. InStep is now considering moving staff from the Paris office to a purpose-built, six-storey building in the same town. Beauchamp has a population of 25,000, with a high proportion of young people. The relocation, if it goes ahead, will create employment opportunities for local inhabitants.

How do you think staff will react to the proposed relocation?
What reasons might some staff have for opposing the relocation?

A 'getting to know you' meeting

The Vice-President of the parent company has come to Paris to discuss the proposed relocation with two senior managers from the Paris subsidiary and an independent relocation consultant. This group will discuss the relocation and make a recommendation to the Board of Directors on whether to go ahead with the relocation or not.

Task

Work in groups of four. Take one of these roles.

- Student A: Vice-President, parent company
 Student B: Senior Manager, Paris subsidiary Student C: Senior Manager, Paris subsidiary Student D: Management Consultant
 (an independent adviser)

As you do not know each other well, you all meet for social reasons in the Paris subsidiary's boardroom. The purpose of the meeting is to get to know each other better. Use your knowledge of social English to create a warm, friendly atmosphere.

A communication from the Vice-President, parent company

Read the message from the Vice-President. Discuss the questions. How do you think staff will react to this message? Do you think the benefits described by the Vice-President will persuade staff to accept the relocation? Why? / Why not?

MESSAGE FROM THE VICE-PRESIDENT TO ALL STAFF

A decision concerning the proposed relocation to Beauchamp will be made in the near future. The relocation offers our company significant benefits:

- The reduction in costs will boost our profits.
- The town council in Beauchamp has offered us tax incentives to relocate to their town.
- The relocation will result in improved working conditions and better communication.

- b) Honda skydivers push limits of TV adverts
- c) Viewers tune out of normal TV advertising; Honda responds

FT

by Andrew Edgecliffe-Johnson

In a new definition of a publicity stunt, Channel 4 and Honda have turned to a team of skydivers to tackle the problem of viewers tuning out of traditional television advertising.

On Thursday night, the broadcaster was due to devote an entire 3 minute 20 second break in the middle of Come Dine With Me, its dinner party programme, to a live skydiving jump in which 19 stuntmen spelt out the carmaker's brand name. Described as the first live advertisement in modern times, the campaign is the latest attempt by advertisers and broadcasters to find alternatives to the 30-second spot.

The development of digital video recorders such as Sky+ and Tivo, which allow ads to be skipped, has forced advertising agencies and channels' sales teams to collaborate on more innovative attempts to keep the viewer's attention. 'We wanted to create something unmissable,' said Andy Barnes, the broadcaster's Sales Director. 'This concept breaks the boundaries of TV advertising,' he added, highlighting a Channel 4 campaign called 'innovating the break'.

The campaign follows initiatives such as LG's 'Scarlet' campaign, in which the television manufacturer ran advertisements appearing to trail a glamorous new television show, which turned out to be a promotion for the design features of its 'hot new series' of screens.

Thursday night's live advertisement, while designed to demonstrate the power of television advertising, was backed up by a complex multimedia and public-relations campaign.

The campaign's developers – including Channel 4's in-house creative team, Wieden + Kennedy, Starcom, Collective and Hicklin Slade & Partners – spent more than a month pushing the Honda slogan of 'difficult is worth doing' before Thursday night's slot.

A poster campaign, a series of television 'teaser' advertisements and a website have been backed up by digital advertising and press coverage. All are building up to a traditional 30-second advertising campaign, starting on June 1, said Ian Armstrong, Marketing Manager of Honda UK.

'The 30-second ad is alive and well,' Mr Barnes said, pointing to data released this week which showed that commercial television had enjoyed its best April in five years.

For Honda, however, the elements surrounding the core 30-second campaign are designed to generate the intangible buzz of word-of-mouth advertising, Mr Barnes added.

Thursday night's skydive would almost certainly go on YouTube, Mr Armstrong predicted. 'Commercially, that's a fantastic result, as it means our marketing investment becomes more efficient because consumers are doing our marketing for us.'

B Read the article again and answer the questions.

- 1 Why did Honda need a new publicity stunt with skydivers?
- 2 Why was the Honda advert unique?
- 3 Why are Sky+ and Tivo a problem for advertisers?

Kieran Prior: Goldman Sachs's whizz-kid wheeler dealer

Working on the noisy, frenetic trading desk at Goldman Sachs's London offices on Fleet Street earlier this decade, Kieran Prior and John Yeatts, two bright and ambitious twentysomethings from very different worlds, became close friends.

Although Prior, then 23, was just a year older than Yeatts when they met, he enjoyed giving practical advice, teasing the American about his Saturday-night dates. Yeatts returned the favour. When traders ordered lunch delivered to their desks, Yeatts cut up Prior's food and fed him one small bite at a time. Prior was born with a rare condition that affects his movement and impairs his speech. He cannot get out of his wheelchair unaided, and has never been able to walk.

Yet despite these physical limitations, Prior is thriving on Goldman's trading desk – possibly the most demanding and competitive testing ground in finance – winning the admiration of colleagues while gaining experience, confidence and responsibility.

It's not easy managing investments of any size for the high-powered trading machine that supplies much of the earnings of Wall Street's most profitable firm. It is extraordinary that Prior is able to do so with such physical limitations.

Gary Williams, the former head of European equity trading, who hired Prior nearly eight years ago, has enormous respect for his determination. 'He is an exceptionally smart, perceptive guy who has purposefully risen to – and overcome – so many challenges,' said Williams. 'The noise and hurly-burly of the trading floor make trading more difficult for someone in Kieran's position, but the challenge actually appeals to him.'

Intellectually, Prior, now 29, has few limits. Since joining Goldman as a financial analyst in the equity division in 2000, Prior – whose IQ score of 238 puts him in the top 1% of the world's population – has risen from performing basic research analysis and trading Euro Stoxx futures to running a $50m (£25m) group of European equities and derivatives.

Prior joined Goldman just four days after he graduated from university. Early on, he caught the attention of John Thornton, Goldman's then-president, as Thornton was walking across the trading floor. Thornton stopped for a brief chat – and was amazed.

'I couldn't help but be impressed,' said Thornton. 'First of all, Kieran's sheer, raw talent is impressive, and when you add to that the determination he shows getting through the day in a place like Goldman Sachs, which is so demanding, it is just breathtaking.'

Prior is free to invest in almost any business sector, but recently narrowed his focus to just 20 companies because of the extreme volatility in the markets. 'I joined Goldman in a bear market,' he said, 'but these markets are the most difficult I've ever seen, so I'm just using this period of volatility to learn as much as I can.'

Business in brief

It was a bad day for the London market. Following disappointing results from FedEx in the US and fears of a credit crunch, the FTSE 100 fell 105 points or 1.8 per cent to 5,756.9, while the FTSE 250 fell 189.1 points or 1.9 per cent to 9,534.8.

10 Only eight blue-chip stocks managed to make gains. The best was Smith & Nephew. Shares in the medical devices group rose 2.9 per cent to 595½p after UBS upgraded the stock to a 'buy' recommendation. S&N was also supported by rumours of a bid approach from a Japanese company.

20 On the other hand, British Airways, down 5.2 per cent to 225¾p, fell even further after Morgan Stanley cut its target to 149p. This was because of worries about increasing fuel prices.

25 Tate and Lyle, the sugar and sweeteners group, lost 5.2 per cent to 402¼p after CityGroup lowered its forecasts because of rising corn prices. Following recent floods in the US, the cost of corn has risen 25 per cent.

MAKE YOUR PITCH

Entrepreneurs with new business ideas take part in a TV programme to persuade wealthy people to invest in their project.

Background

BNT is an American TV channel specialising in business news. Currently, it has a weekly programme called Make your pitch. In the programme, entrepreneurs of any age can make a pitch (a persuasive sales presentation) to two wealthy business people (tycoons) asking for money to help them develop a business idea, product or service. If the tycoons think the idea will be profitable, they invest some of their own money in the project. However, they usually ask for a large stake in the entrepreneurs' business in return for their investment.

Rules of the competition

Read the rules that the entrepreneurs are given before they make their pitch.

- 1 Introduce yourself and state the name of your business.
- 2 Tell the tycoons how much you want them to invest and on what terms.
- 3 Make a short presentation (2–3 minutes) describing your idea/product/service.
- 4 Say who the product is aimed at: for example, the type of person and age range.
- 5 Mention any research you have done or actions you have taken to sell the product/service or develop your idea.
- 6 Try to convince the tycoons that your idea/product or service will be profitable and make money for them.

🔊 CD1.41 Listen to an entrepreneur ending a presentation of the product, a storage device, that he and his partner want the tycoons to invest in. Tick the correct statements.

- 1 The product can be adapted to any space.
- 2 It can be used to store different kinds of household objects.
- 3 It looks impressive.
- 4 It can only be used once.
- 5 The entrepreneurs want the tycoons to invest €200,000 in their business.
- 6 If the tycoons accept the entrepreneurs' offer, they will end up owning 20% of the business.

🔊 CD1.42 Listen to the questions and answers following the entrepreneurs' pitch. In groups, discuss these questions.

- 1 If you were one of the tycoons, what other questions would you ask the entrepreneurs before negotiating a stake in their company?
- 2 Do you think you would invest in this product? Why? / Why not?
- 3 If you decided to invest, what stake in the business would you ask for?
- 4 Apart from investing money, how else could you add value to their business? For example, personal qualities? business experience?

In tonight's programme, there will be four pitches to the tycoons by entrepreneurs.

- | | |
|-------------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| 1 100 sculptures of famous people | 3 Alfresh lunch box with cooler |
| 2 New Formula XF anti-wrinkle cream | 4 On-the-Spot car cleaning |

Task

The tycoons listen to a short pitch (1–2 minutes) from each of the entrepreneurs. Then they ask questions to get additional information. Finally, they decide whether or not they will invest in the project, and on what terms.

- 1 Work in groups of four. Take turns playing the roles of tycoons and entrepreneurs.

- Sculptures of famous people (page 136)
- New Formula XF anti-wrinkle cream (page 141)
- Alfresh lunch box with cooler (page 136)
- On-the-Spot car cleaning (page 144)

- 2 Work as one group. Discuss all four projects. Rank them according to how good an investment they are for the tycoons (1 = excellent investment, 4 = poor investment). If you can't agree, take a vote.

Writing

Write an e-mail to the most successful entrepreneur confirming the investment which the tycoons will make in their project. Give reasons for the tycoons' decision.

2 International meetings

A Think about the last three meetings you attended (not necessarily business meetings, e.g. residents' meetings or sports club meetings) and answer these questions.

- 1 What was the purpose of each meeting?
- 2 What size were they?
- 3 Were they formal or informal?
- 4 Were they successful or not? Why?

B Do the quiz.

What are the following called?

- 1 the person in charge of a meeting
a) chief b) chair c) boss
- 2 the people at the meeting
a) audience b) attenders c) participants
- 3 the list of points to be discussed
a) agenda b) schedule c) timetable
- 4 one point on the list
a) theme b) item c) topic
- 5 an official record of what was said or decided
a) protocol b) notes c) minutes
- 6 what you send when you are unable to attend a meeting
a) excuses b) apologies c) pardon
- 7 a method of reaching a decision
a) vote b) proposal c) consensus
- 8 what is decided at the end of the meeting
a) action plan b) agenda c) handouts

C Discuss your answers to the quiz with a partner. How important are these things in the meetings you attend?

D International meetings can involve people from very different cultures. Read the experiences of meetings in different cultures on the right and answer these questions.

- 1 Which would make you feel the most or least comfortable?
- 2 Which feels the most or least familiar?
- 3 Do you recognise any of the styles from direct experience?
- 4 Is there anything in your own business meeting culture which people from other cultures might find unusual?

E  CD1.43 Listen to an expert talking about international meetings and answer the questions.

- 1 Which three areas are identified as causing problems in international meetings?
- 2 What tips does the expert give for successful international meetings?

F  CD1.43 Listen again. Are the following true (T) or false (F), according to the expert?

- 1 Punctuality is important in all cultures.
- 2 In a hierarchical culture, people feel able to express disapproval of the ideas of a superior.
- 3 Clear meeting aims are a priority in most cultures.
- 4 The main purpose of meetings is to take decisions.
- 5 It is easy to misinterpret body language in meetings.

G Complete these expressions used by the expert and discuss the meaning.

- 1 time is
- 2 stick to the
- 3 loss of
- 4 getting down to
- 5 small
- 6 relationship

How important do you think these issues are in your business culture?

A Well, in my experience there's great respect for seniority. Participants will enter a meeting in order of seniority, with the most senior person sitting furthest away. The exchange of business cards is important. They respect silence, as this shows serious work is being done. They do not say 'no' directly, as this is considered impolite.

B The sort of meetings I attended were very goal-focused and efficient. People there like agendas which are clear and they stick to them. They believe in good preparation and they feel that meetings are for clearly defined purposes, with action plans at the end. There seemed to be a general feeling of time being precious and not to be wasted. I think they came up with the idea of business breakfasts.

Task

You work for a large multinational company with over 100 offices worldwide (including in your country). The Communications Director has asked you to discuss the topic of meetings across the company and to report back with your findings. The information you provide will help with the future communications policy of the company.

- 1 Work in small groups. Hold a meeting using the following as your agenda, and consider the advantages and disadvantages of each recommendation.
 - a) Hold all meetings in English.
 - b) Limit the number of participants in meetings to a maximum of eight.
 - c) Stop holding meetings in the afternoon of the last working day of the week.
 - d) Use more video conferencing or teleconferencing calls for international meetings
 - e) Limit the length of meetings to one hour.
 - f) Conduct meetings standing up, without chairs, tables or refreshments.
 - g) Introduce weekly 'breakfast meetings' across the company.
- 2 Write some tips for effective meetings based on your discussion.
- 3 Present your ideas to another group.

C In my experience, meetings follow an established format with a detailed agenda. The use of titles like 'Mr' and 'Mrs' is important. There seems to be a lot of handshaking and sometimes kissing on the cheeks. Discussion is more about process than results, so there may be fewer decisions or action plans. The timetable is changeable, with interruptions and changes likely. The focus is on establishing relationships before moving on to the tasks. A business lunch here can last up to three hours.

D I found that people like to know well in advance about a meeting. They expect an agenda and timetable and dislike alterations. They communicate in a very direct way, follow the agenda precisely and minute all items. My jokes didn't seem to make people laugh, so I guess not being serious is disapproved of. Any proposals were presented in detail with supporting evidence. Generally, the meetings were dominated by the senior person.

E My experience of meetings here was that they are unstructured and often informal, more like a social event. It's normal to have long discussions on other issues, so it's a good idea to prepare and send out an agenda in advance. There was often careful analysis of small details. I found that meetings were more for decision-makers to get input from participants, while key decisions may be made elsewhere.

Sweden has long history of rules and regulations aimed at guiding citizens on the right path. A majority of Swedes seem content with the prohibitions they believe help keep their country one of safest on Earth. As Sweden is extremely child-focused society, much of the paternalistic protection is directed towards children. For example, all television advertising aimed at children under age of 12 – from junk food to toys to video games – has been banned on terrestrial channels before 9 p.m. since 1991. Although it has many admirers, ban is not entirely successful because the satellite television stations that broadcast from outside Sweden are free to target children as much as they like. Despite this, health professionals say the relatively low incidence of children’s advertising has been big factor in the exceptionally low levels of overweight children in Sweden.

Standard Bank overcomes culture shock

It is increasingly common for multinational businesses to send employees on international assignments, but without the right cross-cultural skills, staff will often struggle. Wayne Mullen, Head of Learning and Development at Standard Bank, discusses the impact that cultural challenges can have on employees relocating to another country. In order to be successfully transferred, employees must understand the host-country culture, he argues.

Colleagues from different countries might share similar professional knowledge and skills within a single international organisation, but their ways of working, social skills, body language and ways of doing business are likely to be completely different. They may have different patterns of behaviour which need to be understood and appreciated in order for everyone to work together successfully. For example, while it may be acceptable for Chinese office workers in Hong Kong to use the door-close button on a lift no matter how many people are also getting in, doing such a thing in London would make people extremely angry. It is common for South Africans to ask personal questions of their counterparts shortly after being introduced, while a British colleague may perceive this as impolite and inappropriate. Latin Americans' need for personal space is much less than that of their British colleagues.

Global companies should never underestimate the effect that culture can have on international assignments. Cultural awareness is much more than simply knowing about a country's history and geography. It is about understanding how and why cultures work differently. It is also important to understand your own cultural make-up in order to work more effectively, maximise teamwork and strengthen global competence.

The Standard Bank group operates in 38 different countries, and its London office alone has 56 nationalities. This wide range of nationalities needs to communicate effectively in order to work as one team. The bank recognised that in order to harmonise working practices within its culturally diverse office, it needed to provide foreign workers with a meaningful understanding of British business culture and communication styles. It also needed to offer practical support which allowed employees to cope with the challenges of living and working in an unfamiliar environment; their reactions to day-to-day issues such as the weather, public transport and social etiquette are often the most visible manifestations of culture shock.

Standard Bank has engaged Communicaid, a European culture and communication skills consultancy, to design a tailored training solution which introduces delegates to some of the key cultural differences that they are likely to face in the UK.

Women at work

Student A: Read Article A below.

Student B: Turn to page 137.

Article A

When Nguyen Thu Hang was a child, her mother was a housewife in a small village whose women residents had no say in decision making, either at home or in the community. Now a mother herself, Hang not only shares her husband's burden of earning money for the family and bringing up children, but also has a career and social ambitions.

'Women are much happier than before. They have a good education and careers of their own,' says the 39-year-old who lives and works in Hanoi. 'And, of course, they are more respected in the family and society.' Hang, who carries a sleek laptop in her hand, gets out of an elegant black Mercedes and enters a building where she works as the General Director of Viet Hoang Trade and Investment Company, which specialises in construction and real estate.

Like Hang, many other Vietnamese women also pursue careers these days and have stormed the corporate boardroom to affirm their increasingly important roles. Whether in remote farms or in companies, they have become much more self-confident and are discovering their worth and fulfilling their potential.

Women account for nearly 52 per cent of the workforce in the service sector, 50 per cent in the agricultural and fisheries sector and 37 per cent in industry and construction. Almost a quarter of all companies are run by women, many of whom are also the driving forces behind them. As for their status in the family, Hang says that women's position has improved remarkably. 'We jointly decide important issues in our life, such as work or education for our children. My husband always respects my opinions.'

The greater role of women is attributed to the effective policies of promoting them. The state and party are interested in women's advancement. The NA, the national legislature, has approved Law the on Gender Equality and the Anti-Domestic Violence Law. The government has national programmes for vocational training and preventing trafficking of women and children.

Women's own efforts to acquire knowledge and education have, of course, been a major factor in their advancement. They make up over 40.2 per cent of all university graduates, including nearly 9.8 per cent of PhDs and 30.5 per cent of Master's degree recipients.

But women still face a number of difficulties, including poverty, underemployment, domestic violence, prostitution and gender inequality. 'I think the best way to help women overcome these challenges is to help them study and lead an active lifestyle,' says Hang, whose entry into the boardroom began after she obtained a Master's degree in Britain at the age of 27.

Trade between China and the US

A Work in pairs. Read the two articles quickly and choose the best title for each one.

- US-China trade has cost 2.3 million American jobs
- US protectionism is not the way forward
- Stop blaming China for US trade deficit
- Yuan needs to rise against the US dollar

Article 1

by Xin Zhiming

'The US should focus on improving its overall economic competitiveness instead of seeking protectionism to combat its economic slowdown,' said the latest 2008 White Paper: American Business in China. 'And it should not argue for a stronger currency to reduce its trade deficit with China, since the value of the yuan is not the fundamental cause of the deficit,' said the White Paper, which was released by the American Chamber of Commerce (AmCham) China, AmCham Shanghai and AmCham South China Tuesday. The US economy is currently slowing, while its trade deficit with China remains high, standing at $163.3 billion last year. The deficit has led to protectionism against Chinese goods and investment in the US. The two countries should make 'defending and preserving the openness of the trade relationship a core commitment', the White Paper said. 'Instances of co-operation between China and US far exceed instances of dispute.

'An open US and an open China will lead to sustained benefits for both US companies and citizens back home,' said Harley Seyedin, Chairman of AmCham South China.'

from China Daily

Article 2

BY ANDREA HOPKINS

The US trade deficit with China cost 2.3 million American jobs over six years, the Economic Policy Institute said on Wednesday.

5 Even when they found new jobs, workers who had lost jobs to Chinese competition saw their earnings decrease by an average of $8,146 each year because the new jobs paid less, according to the report, funded in part by labor unions.

10 "(We hope) it will help to focus the debate on trade to where it needs to be right now with respect to China," said Scott Paul, Executive Director of the Alliance for American Manufacturing.

15 US manufacturers, labor unions, and many lawmakers have long accused

China of manipulating its currency to give Chinese companies an unfair advantage in international trade, and are pressing China to continue to allow the yuan to rise against the US dollar.

20 China has said the United States should recognize how much its yuan currency has already risen against the dollar—it is about 20 per cent higher since China revalued its currency in July 2005.

25 China has also said the fact that Americans save much less of their incomes than the Chinese do has increased the trade deficit. Chinese-made goods have been extremely popular in recent years with US consumers looking for low prices.

from Reuters

B Look at the articles again. Decide if the statements are true (T) or false (F).Article 1

- 1 The US should concentrate on being more competitive economically.
- 2 The US should be protectionist.

- 4 The US and China should focus on the openness of their trading relationship.

Article 2

- 7 The Chinese save less of their income than Americans.

In fact, this concept of¹ – that's what we teach – says that there is no one way, there are many² ways, ranging from the very³, very high-.....⁴ negotiations that are generally win–lose, all the way through to the very, very⁵ negotiations, which are deemed as⁶. And there's no right or⁷, or there's no good or bad, it's just what's appropriate to the⁸.

C CD2.20 Listen to the final part and answer the questions.

- 1 What behaviours are appropriate for being a good negotiator?
- 2 How do you tell if there is more scope for negotiation?

D Discuss the questions.

- 1 What do you think makes a really good negotiator?
- 2 Do you prefer high-conflict win–lose negotiations or cooperative win–win negotiations?
- 3 How common is negotiating in your country?

A Work in pairs. Try to sell something you have on you (a watch, bracelet, etc.) or a household object to your partner.

B Discuss the questions.

- 1 Were you pleased with the outcome of the negotiation in Exercise A?
- 2 What strategy or tactics did your partner use to achieve his/her objective?

C In his book The Art of Winning, Harry Mills says that most negotiations have seven stages. These are listed below, but in the wrong order. Put the stages in order. What word do the initial letters of the stages spell?

- Tie up loose ends
Confirm what has been agreed. Summarise the details on paper.
- Explore each other's needs
Build rapport. State your opening position. Learn the other side's position.
- Ready yourself
Prepare your objectives, concessions and strategy. Gather information about the other side.
- Probe with proposals
Make suggestions and find areas of agreement.
- Close the deal
Bring the negotiation to a clear and satisfactory end.
- Signal for movement
Signal that you are prepared to move from your original position. Respond to signals from the other side.
- Exchange concessions
Give the other side something in return for something you need or want.

D  CD2.21 Listen to seven extracts from a negotiation between two buyers from an exclusive department store in Moscow and Pierlucci, an Italian supplier of leather goods. Match each extract (1–7) to one of the stages of Harry Mills’s list (a–g).

PAMPAS LEATHER COMPANY

Case study

An Argentinian exporter is negotiating to sell into the US market. It must reach a deal on the best possible terms while seeking to build a long-term relationship with its distributor.

Background

The Pampas Leather Company is based in Buenos Aires, Argentina. This well-established business exports leather and fur jackets, as well as accessories such as handbags, belts and wallets, to world markets. It uses the best quality leather, introduces creative designs in its collections, has excellent quality control and a reliable delivery service.

A major US distributor in Seattle, West Coast Apparel (WCA), has contacted Pampas Leather about marketing a range of Pampas's men's leather jackets under the WCA brand name. WCA has a chain of stores in all the large cities on the West Coast of the US. WCA's President, Brad Schulz, wants to put three models of the jackets on the market: the Clubman (the most expensive model), the Nightrider and the Look.

It is now May. Pampas Leather has agreed to make the jackets and have them ready for shipment to Seattle early in November. This will not be easy, as Pampas has to fulfil several large orders before dealing with the WCA order.

Several points of the contract need to be negotiated. Roberto González of Pampas has flown to Seattle to meet Brad Schulz. The Marketing Director of each company will also be present at the meeting. The purpose of the meeting is to make a deal acceptable to both sides, which could be the basis for a long-term relationship.

Task

You are negotiating as either:

- the Pampas Leather team (Roberto González and his Marketing Director): Turn to page 138.
- the WCA team (Brad Schulz and his Marketing Director): Turn to page 142.

Read your information files, identify your priorities and work out your strategy and tactics. Then negotiate so that you get the best deal for your company.

Writing

As the owner of either the Pampas Leather Company or West Coast Apparel, write an e-mail summarising the points agreed during the negotiation. Indicate any terms of the contract requiring further discussion or clarification.

3 Doing business internationally

A Tim Collins goes to Saudi Arabia

Tim Collins, Sales Manager, travelled to Riyadh to present his company's TV sets to Karim Al-Jabri, president of a retail group.

The meeting, arranged for Monday, was postponed two days later. When Collins finally met Al-Jabri, he was surprised that several other Saudi visitors attended the meeting. He turned down Al-Jabri's offer of coffee, and when asked about his impressions of Riyadh, said that he had been too busy dealing with paperwork to see the sights.

During the meeting, Al-Jabri often interrupted the conversation to take telephone calls. Collins wanted to get down to business, but Al-Jabri seemed to prefer to talk about English football teams. When Collins admired a painting on the office wall, Al-Jabri insisted on giving it to him as a gift. Collins was very embarrassed.

Two days later, Collins presented his company's new products. A large number of staff attended and asked technical questions which Collins couldn't answer. The following day, Collins asked Al-Jabri if he wanted to place an order for the TV sets. 'If God pleases,' was the answer. Collins thought that meant 'Yes'.

Collins did not secure the contract. When he e-mailed Al-Jabri a month later, he was informed that Mr Al-Jabri was away on business.

Task

- 1 Tim Collins made several mistakes because he lacked knowledge of the local business culture. In pairs, discuss his mistakes and note them down.
- 2 Turn to page 138 and check your answers.
- 3 Draw up a list of advice you would give a visitor like Tim Collins.

B Carson Martin visits Japan

Carson Martin, Managing Director of a Canadian golf equipment company, travelled to Osaka to meet Yasuo Matsumoto, General Manager of a sports goods business.

Martin arrived punctually for his meeting with Matsumoto. He hoped it would be with Matsumoto alone, but some of Matsumoto's colleagues were also present. After introductions, they exchanged business cards. When Martin received Matsumoto's card, he put it away in his wallet. However, Matsumoto examined Martin's card closely for some time.

After a short discussion, Martin said, 'Well, are you willing to be an exclusive agent for us or not?' Matsumoto looked embarrassed, then he said, 'It will be under consideration.' Martin was not clear what Matsumoto meant. Matsumoto went on to say that he had to consult many colleagues in other departments before they could make a decision.

After the meeting, Matsumoto invited Martin to join him for dinner. Matsumoto complimented Martin on his ability to use chopsticks. Later, Martin gave Matsumoto two gifts: a guide book for Ontario, Canada, wrapped in red paper, and a bunch of beautiful white water lilies for his wife. 'I hope they appreciate my gifts,' he thought.

He did not hear from Matsumoto for some while. However, six months later, he received an e-mail from Matsumoto: 'Please return to Osaka as soon as possible. We would like to meet you to discuss the agency agreement.'

Read the case, then discuss the questions in pairs.

- 1 Why was Martin disappointed when:
 - a) he first entered Matsumoto's office?
 - b) Matsumoto said, 'It will be under consideration'?
- 2 What mistakes did Martin make when he:

The ethics of résumé writingA In groups, discuss the question.

Is there ever a time when it is OK to lie on a résumé?

B Read the headline and subheading of the article. In pairs, predict five words that will appear in the article. Include some words connected to dishonesty. Check the article to see if you were correct. Underline all the words in the article connected with dishonesty.

The ethics of résumé writing

It's never OK to lie on a résumé. But what about stretching the truth?

by Clinton D. Korver

How much can you “dress up” your résumé to make yourself as strong a candidate as possible without crossing the ethical line of deception? Consider a few conflicting thoughts:

- Over 50% of people lie on their résumé.
- A Monster.com blog about the dangers of lying on your résumé elicited 60 comments from job seekers recommending lying and only 46 discouraging it. Recommenders justified lying by claiming: everyone else is doing it, companies lie about job requirements, and it's hard to get a good job.
- Executives caught lying on their résumés often lose their jobs.

If you are reading this blog, you probably are not tempted by dishonesty. But what about the following:

- Claiming a degree that was not earned because you did most of the work and were only a few credits short.
- Creating a more impressive job title because you were already doing all of the work of that position.
- Claiming a team's contributions as your own, because other members did not carry their weight.
- Inflating the number of people or range of functions for which you had direct responsibility because you really did have a great deal of influence over them.

These are called rationalizations—constructing a justification for a decision you suspect is really wrong. You create a story that sounds believable but doesn't pass close examination. You begin to fool yourself. You develop habits of distorted thinking.

So where is the line? You need to decide that for yourself. Here are some tests to keep your thinking clear:

- Other-shoe test: How would you feel if the shoe were on the other foot and you were the hiring manager looking at this résumé? What assumptions would you draw and would they be accurate?
- Front-page test: Would you think the same way if the accomplishment in question were reported on the front page of the Wall Street Journal? Or your prior employer's internal newsletter?

But wait, you say. My résumé doesn't quite pass these tests, but there is something real underneath my claims, and I do not want to sell myself short.

When in doubt, ask an old boss. While asking an old boss may be difficult, it has many benefits. Precisely because it is difficult, it forces you to think clearly and sometimes creatively. Asking also checks the accuracy of your claims, trains your old boss in how to represent you during reference checks, and sometimes your old boss may give you better ways to represent yourself.

from Business Week

C Read the article again and answer the questions.

- 1 What reasons are given for not being totally honest on your CV?
- 2 What can happen to senior managers who lie on their CVs?
- 3 Which of the four rationalisations do you think is the most serious? Why?
- 4 What happens to you when you start using rationalisations?
- 5 What are the advantages of asking an old boss?

D Discuss the two situations and decide what you would do in each case.

- 1 You discover that one of your top employees, who has done an excellent job for the last 15 years, lied about their qualifications when she joined the company.
- 2 One of your employees, who is not a good worker, has asked you to give him a good reference. You would be happy if this employee left the company.

C CD2.30 Listen again. Tick the expressions from the Useful language box that you hear.

USEFUL LANGUAGE

a) STATING THE PROBLEM

b) LOOKING AT OPTIONS

So, what are our options?
There are (two/several) ways we could deal with this.

c) DISCUSSING POSSIBLE EFFECTS

If we do that, he may come to his senses.
One consequence could be that he gives in his resignation.

d) CHANGING YOUR APPROACH

f) MAKING A DECISION

The best way to deal with the problem is to talk to him.
Let's see if we can sort this out.

g) STATING FUTURE ACTION

I'll arrange for Tom to meet us.
The next thing to do is fix up a meeting.

D Role-play this situation.

You are senior managers of a department store. Your business is losing market share. You strongly suspect your main rival is using unfair methods to compete against you. For example, you are almost sure that your rival has been:

- a) trying to obtain information about your marketing strategy from an employee who has just left your company;
- b) offering members of your award-winning window-display team exceptionally high salaries and bonuses to leave your organisation.

Hold a meeting to consider how to solve the problems.

Principles or profit?

An international drugs company is struggling with a number of ethical dilemmas. Its future success depends on making the right choices now.

Background

Universal Pharmaceuticals (UP) is based in Atlanta, Georgia. During the 1990s, it was highly successful thanks to the effective treatments it developed for people suffering from diabetes and Parkinson's Disease. However, the company has been less successful in recent years because its drug for the treatment of asthma turned out to have harmful side effects and was withdrawn from the market. The company's image was also damaged when a newspaper ran a series of articles criticising some unfair methods used by UP's sales representatives to sell the company's products. The writer of the articles questioned whether UP was living up to its mission statement that it was an 'ethical company which will always put principle before profit'.

Ethical dilemmas

At present, the management of UP are faced with three ethical dilemmas which they must discuss and resolve in the best interests of the company. The first concerns a new drug which could benefit poor people in Africa.

 CD2.31 Two directors of the company, Ernesto and Ingrid, are talking about the problem. Listen and make notes on the problem. Then, working with a partner, summarise the ethical dilemma which the company must deal with.

Discussion topics for the management meeting

The first item on the agenda is the new drug to treat river blindness. Then there are two other problems relating to drugs that the company is developing. They are summarised below in a discussion document which has been circulated to all participants attending the meeting.

Read about the problems relating to two other drugs and note the key points.

» Test results on PX200, our new drug for treating heart disease

There is great interest in PX200, which is in the final stages of development. Up until now, the test results have been impressive. However, the recent series of tests has produced disappointing results. It seems that some patients have experienced severe breathing difficulties and other unpleasant side effects after taking the drug, while most patients have received significant benefits from it in terms of lower blood pressure and less pain.

Should we make public the results of this test, as we have done with previous test results, or should we withhold the information at this stage?

New dieting product

Our R&D department has been developing a new diet drink which will help people lose weight. The drink has been tested on animals, but some became sick in the early trials. Up until now, we have been reluctant to test new products on animals since we claim to be an ethical company. However, the new drink could be extremely profitable when it is launched. Should we continue to test this product on animals or try to develop it without using them for our research?

Task

You are members of UP's board of directors. Hold a meeting to discuss the three ethical dilemmas. One of you should lead the discussion.

- 1 Use the agenda on the right to guide your discussion. The chairperson starts by briefly summarising each problem.
- 2 In each case, start by discussing the options which are available to UP to deal with the problem. Then decide how to deal with the situation. If you can't agree, take a vote.

Watch the Case study commentary on the DVD-ROM.

Agenda

- 1 The new drug for River Blindness
- 2 Test results for the PX200 (heart problems)
- 3 Animal testing for a dieting product

Father of the feel-good factory

by Jenny Wiggins

Sir Lindsay Owen-Jones does not like being photographed. 'Do I have to smile?' he says gruffly. He exudes the air of a man who has done this many, many times before.

Such expertise derives from the fact that Sir Lindsay is frequently photographed with models, girls far taller than he is, who wear lipstick, eyeshadow and nail polish made by L'Oréal, the company he has worked for since 1969. For nearly 20 years, he was Chief Executive of L'Oréal, the world's biggest beauty company and owner of brands such as Maybelline, Redken, Lancôme and Vichy.

Although he stepped back from the day-to-day running of the company two years ago, handing over the job to Jean-Paul Agon, he remains Chairman.

Sir Lindsay, who turns 62 this month, has spent the better part of his life trying to convince women and men that buying L'Oréal's lotions and shampoos will make them feel good.

L'Oréal is a curious destination for a man who had 'no intention' of taking a job in the consumer goods industry. Yet he was drawn to the beauty company. 'It was still quite a small company, but was thought to be going places and was considered a great example of creative marketing and original advertising campaigns. Cosmetics is a business of intuition. Consumers don't tell you what they need; you've got to guess.'

He credits his predecessor, François Dalle, with teaching him basic business sense while he was working his way up the ranks of L'Oréal.

'He single-handedly ran this company and did every marketing job for every brand, all at the same time. But he was a genius. I think one of the reasons I got responsibility so young was that I could interpret the things he said, which often were the opposite of what he actually said literally. So when I got the job as Chief Executive, it came totally naturally to me that my priority was going to be to write L'Oréal in the sky of every country in the world.'

Under Sir Lindsay's leadership, L'Oréal did just that. Annual sales rose from a few million euros to more than €17bn as the company acquired foreign cosmetic groups such as Shu Uemura in Japan, Kiehl's in the US and the Body Shop in Britain.

Sir Lindsay harboured international ambitions even as a child. 'My mother dreamed of parties at Monte Carlo and the bright lights. She transmitted to me the idea that excitement and fun was being international and travelling and speaking languages. It was easy as a teenager in a slightly grim 1950s Britain to see the cars going into Monte Carlo and to say, "Wow, one day I'm going to be there."

C Read the article again and match the descriptions below (1–10) to these four people. Two of the descriptions are not mentioned in the article.

a) Lindsay Owen-Jones

b) Jean-Paul Agon

c) François Dalle

d) Lindsay's mother

- | | |
|--|--|
| 1 had international ambitions from a very young age. | 6 was attracted by the lifestyle of the rich and famous. |
| 2 runs L'Oréal. | 7 ran the company on his own. |
| 3 is Chairman of L'Oréal. | 8 likes going to concerts and reading. |
| 4 was attracted to L'Oréal before it became very successful. | 9 climbed the career ladder at L'Oréal. |
| 5 relaxes by sailing and skiing. | 10 dreamed of parties at Monte Carlo. |

D Take three minutes to make some notes about L'Oréal. Use your notes to give a one-minute presentation to your partner. Your partner will then ask you a question about it.

E Without looking back at the article, complete the gaps with prepositions.

- 1 Such expertise derives the fact that Sir Lindsay is frequently photographed.
- 2 Although he stepped the day-to-day running of the company two years ago, handing the job Jean-Paul Agon, he remains Chairman.
- 3 He credits his predecessor, François Dalle , teaching him basic business sense.
- 4 ... while he was working his way the ranks of L'Oréal.
- 5 My mother dreamed parties at Monte Carlo.

F Discuss the questions.

- 1 Would you like to work for Sir Lindsay? Why? / Why not?
- 2 What kind of leader would you like to work for?
- 3 Who is the worst leader you have come across?

He exudes the air of a man who has done this many, many times before.
- Which or that are used for things.

America will find opportunity in scarcity

by Eric Schmidt

We now need to encourage investment in new high-technology industries such as clean energy and environmental technology. These are sectors we have lacked political leadership not just recently, but for decades.

The Internet, enables the open and free exchange of information, is critical to our future economic growth. It has already proved to be vital to entrepreneurs and America's small businesses, generate up to 80 per cent of new jobs in the US. But continuing this record will require a strong federal commitment to keeping the Internet open.

Technologies such as the Internet can also help make our government more open and responsive to citizens. But even those of us are technology's biggest enthusiasts must recognise its limitations. In the end, it is people have to make the decisions.

More than ever, we need a leader will look beyond the old thinking and orthodoxies and understands the importance of investment in ideas and technology for our future.

LINA SPORTS

Case study

A sportswear manufacturer is in need of new leadership. Which of the three candidates has the right style and strategy to lead the company back to success?

Background

Lina Sports S.p.A is an Italian sportswear manufacturer. It was founded by Franco Rossi in 1978 and has since become a world-famous company. Originally, it specialised in tennis shoes, but later it diversified into football, athletics, tennis and volleyball clothing. The directors of the company are of different nationalities, and the working language of Lina Sports is English.

During the last three years, Lina Sports's annual results have been disappointing. Profits have fallen steadily while costs have risen, and competition in its main markets has been fierce. At present, it is reviewing its strategy in order to improve its performance. It also faces the possibility of being taken over. A giant French retailing group has announced that it would like to acquire the company, but only in the event of a 'friendly takeover', with full agreement from the present management.

Franco Rossi is now 58 years old. He would like to become Chairman of the company in the near future and to appoint one of the present directors as CEO to run Lina Sports. There are three possible candidates for this position. Each candidate will present his/her ideas for the company's future strategy to the board of directors. The director who makes the most persuasive presentation will replace Franco Rossi as CEO of the company.

Problems faced by Lina Sports

A report by JPS Consultants identified four reasons for Lina Sports's poor results in recent years. The company had:

- launched too many product lines in a wide range of sports
- invested in too many expensive endorsements with top sports people
- suffered from fierce competition from stronger rivals
- lost its reputation for being innovative.

Strategies for turning round the company

The leadership candidates will present three alternative strategies for the Board to consider. Consider which, in your opinion, appears to be the best one for the company. Do not discuss your choice at this stage.

Strategy 1

Lina Sports must give up its independence and merge with, or be taken over by, a larger, financially stronger company.

Strategy 2

Lina Sports should acquire a number of smaller companies and focus more on making sports accessories.

Strategy 3

Lina Sports should grow organically by revising its organisation, product ranges and marketing strategy.

Task

1 Divide into two groups:

Group A: The three directors, each presenting a different strategy to the board

Group B: Members of the board.

2 Look at your role card and prepare for the meeting.

Director 1: Turn to page 139.

Director 2: Turn to page 143.

Group B: Turn to page 145.

3 Each director presents his/her ideas for the company's future strategy and answers any questions the other board members wish to ask.

4 The other board members discuss the three presentations and decide which director has given the most convincing presentation.

5 All board directors discuss the future strategy of Lina Sports and add any comments they wish.

Writing

As Chairman of Lina Sports, write an e-mail to the Head of JPS Consultants summarising the three business strategies and indicating which one has been chosen, giving reasons for your choice. Ask the Head of JPS to comment on your decision.

McDonald's stirs up battle with Starbucks

by James Quinn

Starbucks' Chief Executive Jim Donald – who has presided over a 50 per cent decline in the retailer's share price in the last 12 months – is to be replaced by founder and Chairman Howard Schultz.

His appointment comes after a dark 12 months for Starbucks, which has seen it lose out to rivals such as Dunkin' Donuts and McDonald's, who have begun to replicate its success. Schultz is now set to slow the expansion of the retailer's growth in the US, closing under-performing stores in direct response to the slowing North American economy. Instead, he will focus on the company's international plans, using money originally earmarked for US store openings for its global expansion plans.

Fast-food giant McDonald's is set to take on Starbucks in the competitive coffee market, with plans to open coffee bars across the United States. McDonald's, until now better known for Big Mac burgers than its beverages, yesterday detailed plans to roll out coffee bars complete with their own 'baristas' in its near-14,000 North American stores.

Although there is no fixed timescale for the roll-out, trials are already under way, and it is believed the push could add $1bn a year to McDonald's $21.6bn of annual sales. The aim is to compete head-to-head with Starbucks in the ever-increasing brewed coffee market.

The trial involves recruiting 'baristas' – a term made famous by Starbucks – to stores, where espresso machines are displayed at the counter, so allowing customers to actually see the drinks being made. This is in direct contrast to McDonald's traditional approach, where products tend to be made out of sight from the consumer.

McDonald's is also trying to demystify the at times confusing Starbucks approach to coffee, replacing sizes such as 'venti' and 'grande' with a simplistic small, medium and large.

In a direct side-swipe at its coffee-focused rival, it is even going so far as to use the difficulties customers often have in pronouncing words like 'latte' in consumer advertising in Kansas City, where one of the trials is taking place.

A McDonald's spokesman told the Daily Telegraph that the push is part of the company's global focus on offering 'great products at great value', suggesting the price point will be somewhat lower than that of Starbucks. The move follows on from a previous roll-out of its coffee products, and is part of a wider re-imagining of many of its stores.

Reports

A report should be well organised, with information in a logical order. There is no set layout for a report. It will depend on:

- a) the type of report
- b) the company style.

The format used here is suitable for formal reports:

- title
- executive summary
- introduction
- findings
- conclusion
- recommendations

The executive summary is a summary of the main points and conclusion of the report. It gives the reader a quick overview of the total situation.

The introduction shows the points that will be looked at.

The findings are the facts discovered.

The conclusion is what you think about the facts and how you interpret them.

Recommendations are practical suggestions to deal with the situation and ideas for making sure future activities run more easily.

Business Software plc Product report

Executive summary

We have been contacted by Lenz AG, a German manufacturer of mobile telephones, and asked about the possibility of a co-operation agreement. We would adapt our business software for use in their products. Tests show that their product is a very good one and popular with our target market.

Introduction

This report will look at:

- the hardware manufacturer and their equipment
- software that could be used on their mobile phones
- the advantages of working together
- recommendations for action.

Findings

- 1 Lenz has been developing cheap, small-scale electronic devices for 35 years. In the last five years, they have focused on more expensive mobile phones for businesspeople. These have been very successful. One in four mobile phones for the business market is a Lenz.
- 2 Our new Executive Organiser software has a lot of attractive features for the travelling businessperson (e.g. address book, e-mail, video and voice recorder, street-finder function, etc.).
- 3 Market research shows that there is a lot of interest in our products being used on machines apart from computers.

Conclusion

The two companies have products which fit well together.

Recommendation

We should have a meeting with representatives from Lenz as soon as possible to discuss a joint venture between our companies, with the aim of putting our software onto their mobile phones.

Summaries

When you summarise something, you express the most important facts or points about something in a short and clear form.

Writing a summary involves:

- selecting the most important ideas or facts from a text
- rewriting those ideas/facts in a short, concise form, using your own language
- producing a text which is shorter than the original – usually at least half the number of words.

Here is an example of an original text and two sample summaries.

Hispanics are more influenced by advertising than other US consumers, suggesting that the growth of the Spanish-speaking population could prove beneficial to big corporate sponsors, according to two studies.

A Nielsen Media Research study released on Wednesday found that Spanish-language television viewers pay more attention to commercials and are more likely to base their purchasing decisions on advertisements than other US consumers. The report was issued after Euro RSCG, the marketing communication agency, released a study that showed Hispanics are more aware of brand names than other US consumers.

Taken together, the reports suggest that growing corporate interest in Hispanic marketing might involve factors that go beyond the mere size of the Spanish-speaking population. The US Hispanic population is estimated at about 39m.

The studies also suggest that Hispanic consumers offer big companies the chance to use the kinds of sales pitches that worked with US consumers in decades past, but which are now less popular with advertising-weary viewers.

Fifty-two per cent of Hispanics say they frequently get information for making purchase decisions from watching TV commercials in Spanish, compared with 7 per cent of non-Hispanics watching English-language television.

This summary is effective because:

- it contains the key ideas from the original text
- the language used to express the key ideas is different from the original
- the new text is much shorter in length.

Recent research has found that Spanish TV viewers are very influenced by television commercials when they buy products, and they also know more about brands than other people in the United States.

Another finding of the research was that conventional methods of advertising appeal to Spanish-speaking people, even though other viewers are tired of them. Some interesting statistics: 52% of Hispanics depend on TV commercials for information about what to buy, whereas only 7% of non-Hispanics do.

(96 words)

Sometimes a summary can be expressed in a series of short numbered statements.

- 1 The Spanish-speaking population in the United States is 39m. Research has been carried out into this group's buying habits. Spanish TV viewers are very influenced by television commercials when buying products.
- 2 They know more about brands than other consumers.
- 3 Spanish-speaking people respond to conventional methods of advertising, but other consumers do not.
- 4 52% of Hispanics use television commercials to help them choose products. Only 7% of non-Hispanics do so.

Notices

Notices are used to inform people about changes of plan, instructions or warnings.

A notice needs a clear heading.

Information must be presented in a clear, concise form.

The tone of notices is usually rather formal and impersonal.

It must have the name and position of the person who wrote it and the date.

In your opinion, the Cecile products have sales potential, but the marketing strategy is wrong. You want:

- a new brand name. 'Cecile' does not suit this beautiful jewellery for sophisticated women.
- a new logo. The present logo (three wavy lines) is boring.
- a much wider range of products and designs – at present there are only five in the collection.
- a better slogan. 'Only for you' has not been successful.
- more colours.

Business travel on a budget

by Roger Bray

The mere existence of business class and 'business hotels' tends to convey the impression that anyone travelling in connection with work has cash to spend. But this is untrue. UK-based John Cox, who runs his own publishing consultancy, is a perfect example: 'I mainly fly on Star Alliance carriers and do between 80,000 and 100,000 miles a year, mostly across the Atlantic with United. I always pay the lowest economy fare I can find, but, of course, I earn frequent-flyer points to get upgrades. Sometimes I even go on a Saturday to get the lowest fare.'

'I recently flew from London to Los Angeles, San Francisco and Washington and back – and saved £400 by travelling out on a Saturday rather than Sunday.' For simple trips – three days in New York, for example – he suggests seeking a city break from a tour operator, which might incorporate a fare for midweek flights at the same sort of level otherwise available to passengers flying on Saturdays.

It is also possible to cut the air-ticket bill by booking in advance and avoiding peak travel. A recent study published by BTI UK showed companies could make the greatest savings by booking flights three to four weeks in advance. Mr Cox says he tends to use taxis only when burdened with heavy luggage. 'I'm probably the world's greatest customer of public transport.

A taxi to or from JFK, for example, costs about $60 with a tip. On the AirTrain and subway, it's only $7. Not long ago, I went to Milan for the first time in 20 years, flew to Linate rather than Malpensa because it's much closer to the city, inquired at the airport about transport and took a bus which cost me a couple of euros.' Regarding hotels, Mr Cox says, 'I want a certain level of service, Internet access – preferably wireless – and a good-class laundry service.' High-speed, in-room Internet access is becoming available further and further down the price scale. In the UK, the 470 properties under the Premier Travel Inn brand have high-speed connections in all rooms.

Finally, remember that hotel groups have shifted to 'dynamic pricing', which is jargon for doing what airlines do: altering rates to reflect demand. Try to bear in mind that in city-centre hotels, Tuesday and Wednesday nights are generally the most popular for business travellers.

You chair the meeting. You have not finally decided on the relocation. Listen to the opinions, then make up your mind. You have the following thoughts at present. Add any other points you can think of.

- You can understand that many staff may not want to leave a beautiful city where they have friends and relatives.
- Some staff will not be able to move because they are caring for elderly relatives.
- Overseas visitors would probably prefer to visit the Head Office in Paris, even though hotels there would be more expensive than in the Beauchamp region.

But ...

- The new purpose-built building will help to create a more loyal, less mobile workforce.
- The working environment in the new building will be good for communication and staff relations.
- Buying land for further expansion will not be expensive in the new location.
- Rising rental costs in Paris will make it difficult for InStep to expand in the city.

Business in brief

It was a bad day for the London market. Following disappointing results from FedEx in the US and fears of a credit crunch, the FTSE 100 fell 125 points or 1.8 per cent to 5,756.9, while the FTSE 250 fell 189.1 points or 1.9 per cent to 9,538. Only eight blue-chip stocks managed to make gains. The best was Smith & Nephew. Shares in the medical devices group rose 2.9 per cent to 599p after UBS upgraded the stock to a 'buy' recommendation. S&N was also supported by rumours of a bid approach from a Japanese company.

On the other hand, British Airways, down 5.2 per cent to 225½p, fell even further after Morgan Stanley cut its target to 149p. This was because of worries about increasing fuel prices.

Tate and Lyle, the sugar and sweeteners group, lost 5.8 per cent to 402¾p after CityGroup lowered its forecasts because of rising corn prices. Following recent floods in the US, the cost of corn has risen 2.5 per cent.

Sculptures of famous people

Description

You make sculptures of famous people, e.g. Mohammed Ali, Michael Jackson, George Clooney, etc.

The average price of a sculpture is $30,000. A recent sculpture of Nelson Mandela was bought for $55,000.

The sculptures are aimed at all art lovers, but especially wealthy collectors.

Why you want the money

To finance and market exhibitions of 100 sculptures in New York and San Francisco art galleries next year.

Advantages for tycoons

The sculptures are very popular. The tycoons will be allowed to own nine of the sculptures at the end of the exhibitions.

Negotiating terms

You want the tycoons to invest $200,000 in 100 sculptures. You offer 10% of the total sales revenue.

You may invent any other information you wish. Note: it is likely that the tycoons will ask for a bigger stake in your business. You must decide if it is worth increasing your offer. Try to predict what questions they will ask you.

FT

by Alison Maitland

Nissan Motor's sales executives in Japan used to take cars to customers' homes for viewing, often late in the evening. Now the showrooms and salespeople

5 operate more regular working hours. The change of approach might sound like a decline in personal service. In fact, it is signed to be the opposite. Cars are no longer just 'boys' toys', even in conservative Japan. Nissan's research shows that women make a third of car purchases, and women and men jointly make 15 another third. Female customers overwhelmingly would like there to be more women in the sales teams, but the late hours made the job unappealing to women in a country where there is still often a stark choice between work and family.

20 These findings prompted Carlos Ghosn, Chief Executive of Nissan and Renault, to adopt a strategy to hire and promote more women into the leadership ranks.

Since 2004, Nissan's 'Women in the Driver's Seat' initiative has more than doubled recruitment of female engineering graduates to 17 per cent this year and recruitment of female salespeople has jumped from 15 per cent to 34 per cent.

The number of women managers at Nissan, while still tiny, has risen from 2 per cent to 5 per cent. 'In an ideal situation, we should mirror the market we serve – 50 per cent – but there is a long way to go,' says Miyuki Takahashi, General Manager of the Diversity Development Office that runs the initiative to woo female employees and customers.

At a conference organised by Catalyst, which researches and campaigns for the advancement of women in business. Nissan was one of this year's two award winners, not least for having hit its initial target of women making up 5 per cent of its managers in an industry in which the average is just 0.6 per cent.

Nissan says that getting more women engineers into the company, in which 80 per cent of employees are engineers, is important to its success. 'Males are attracted by big pictures of cars and specifications about performance,' says Ms Takahashi, who was previously Marketing Director in Japan. 'We found most mothers were attracted by pictures of a family having a great time with the car.'

65 To prioritise female customers, three years ago Nissan launched the Serena people carrier, which was designed by and for women. Last year, it won the top-selling spot in Japan. Ms Takahashi says, 'I am convinced that this hit is closely related to women's advancement in Nissan in terms of marketing and sales.

1 You are a buyer for a department store.

- have a shorter delivery time of two weeks
- get a three-year contract with the supplier.

2 You are the director of a kitchen equipment company.

Because business conditions are difficult, you want to:

- continue to pay all your European agents a commission of 5%

- use as many different distributors as possible to sell your goods
- offer agents shorter contracts, with a maximum period of three years.

Information file: Pampas Leather Company

Models You can supply three models: the Clubman, the Nightrider and the Look. The Clubman will be costly to produce, as it is hand-finished, made of high-quality leather and has a unique design.

Quality To reduce costs of production, you will outsource the manufacture of the cheapest model, the Look, to a Chinese firm.

Quantity You want WCA to place an order for at least 3,000 jackets. You need a large order to cover the costs of the additional workers you will have to hire to deal with the order. Try to persuade WCA to buy a large number of the Clubman model, as you make most profit from this model.

Prices	Unit cost of production	Prices quoted to WCA
Clubman	$110	$380
Nightrider	$100	$280
Look	$80	$150

Payment By bank transfer as soon as the goods have been despatched.

Discounts Your policy is to offer new customers a 2% introductory discount on list prices for a first order, and 3% for further orders.

Delivery Prompt delivery within one week of the agreed date.

Guarantee Three years.

- 2 Al-Jabri was probably surprised that Collins hadn't bothered to see at least something of Riyadh, a city that Al-Jabri was proud of.
- 3 Collins shouldn't have been upset that Al-Jabri interrupted the meeting to take telephone calls. This is usual practice in the Arab world.

In your opinion, the company should do the following:

- Focus on other sports, such as golf, rugby and ice hockey, where the competition is less fierce.
- Reduce the company's dependence on the football and athletics market.
- Concentrate more on lifestyle and fashion products, e.g. trainers and footwear for informal occasions.
- Introduce a more open style of management, giving responsibility for some decision-making to lower levels of management. This will improve staff morale.

In your opinion, the company should do the following:

- Bring out collections of footwear and clothing by famous international designers, aimed at the top part of the market. The profit margins on such products will be high.
- Go upmarket and aim to build a strong image for making luxury sports goods. Source all materials from Europe rather than from the Asia-Pacific region. This will help to keep both prices and quality high.
- Make more customised shoes, bags and sports accessories aimed at the top end of the market. This will help to attract consumer attention to the brand.
- Restructure the company into a series of business units, each with its own management reporting to the CEO. This will increase competition within the company, leading to greater efficiency.

Prepare your presentation. You may add any other ideas of your own for improving the company's performance.

You are extremely competitive. You have high standards and expect a lot from yourself and other people. You are probably an impatient person. You like to win at all times and get upset if you lose. You perform well under pressure and enjoy a challenge.

18–26

You are fairly competitive. You are competitive in areas that are important to you. You don't always have to be the best. You are pleased when other people are successful, such as members of your family or your colleagues. You don't believe that 'winning is everything'.

12–17

You are not very competitive. You believe it is more important to take part than to win. You enjoy working in a group rather than individually. You try to avoid pressure as much as possible.

11–10

You are not at all competitive. You are probably a good team player. You want to enjoy life and be as relaxed as possible. You don't like being the centre of attention. You try to avoid working under pressure or having to meet tight deadlines.

In your opinion, the product is the problem. The jewellery is fairly fashionable, but not a lot different from competing products. You want to:

New Formula XF anti-wrinkle cream

Description

The anti-wrinkle cream is based on a secret formula. You visited a tribe in the Amazon jungle last year. The women had beautiful skin because of a cream they put on their faces. They taught you how to make the cream. The product will be aimed at women over 30.

Why you want the money

To manufacture the product, launch and market it.

Advantages for tycoons

You tested the cream with 200 women volunteers; 90% said the cream smoothed their skin and got rid of their wrinkles. The product should be a world-beater.

Turnover/profit projections

You do not have a business plan or turnover/profit projections. You want the tycoons to provide you with expertise in these areas.

Negotiating terms

You want the tycoons to invest $400,000 for a 30% stake in your business.

In your opinion, the company should do the following:

- Buy smaller specialist companies and build them up, e.g. firms making golf bags and balls. There will be less competition in selling these products.
- Reduce the company's endorsements of top sportspeople. Instead, it should pay well-known sportsmen and women to advise the company on new products. This will lead to more product innovation.
- Focus more on developing products with revolutionary designs and higher prices. This will help to improve profit margins.
- Keep the present style of management and introduce a cost-cutting programme, with the aim of reducing costs by 20% in the next year to help profitability.

Prepare your presentation. You may add any other ideas of your own for improving the company's performance.

In your opinion, the Cecile line has a lot of sales potential. You think the products and brand name are excellent. However, you believe the products are not promoted in the right way and not sold in places which reflect the high status of the jewellery. You want:

- to pay a famous film star to endorse the jewellery and wear it as often as possible.
- to spend a lot of money on a creative television commercial to advertise the jewellery.
- to sell the jewellery only in a limited number of high-class jewellery and department stores and at airports.
- to have a new slogan which reflects the upmarket status of the jewellery.
- a top designer to create a new range of jewellery which can be sold under the Cecile brand. You think the present range is too limited.

Two years ago you started up a business, hiring and training unemployed youngsters to clean cars in car parks and garages in Atlanta. You provide modern, high-powered equipment. This enables your workers to clean car interiors and exteriors quickly and to a high standard.

Why you want the money

To expand your cleaning service to other cities in Georgia.

Advantages to tycoons

The business is providing work for unemployed people. This would be good for the tycoons' image.

It is a very successful local business. Last year's turnover was $1.5 million. Profit: $0.3m.

Turnover/profit projections

Negotiating terms

6 Money, Case study, page 59

Tycoons

The entrepreneur(s) will give a short presentation of their product/service, then they will answer your questions. You decide whether to invest in their project and on what terms. You normally ask for a bigger stake than the amount the entrepreneurs offer.

Here are some suggested questions. Try to add three questions to the list.

- Tell us about your background.
- Where did you meet?
- Do you have a business plan?
- How would you describe the market for your product?
- What is special about your product/service?
What are its USPs (unique selling points)?
- Do you have a patent for it?
- How much of your own money have you spent on it?
- What about competitors?
- What are your forecasts for (a) turnover and (b) profit?
- What do you want from us, in addition to money?
- Who will make your product?
- How will you market your product/service?

Note: If you are working with another tycoon, you may wish to offer the whole of the stake yourself in order to make as much profit as possible. You don't have to divide the stake between the two of you!

11 Leadership, Case study, page 111

Other members of the board (not presenting)

11 Relative clauses

- 1 We use who or that in a relative clause to identify people.

UNIT 1 BRANDS

CD1 TRACK 1 (I = INTERVIEWER, R1 = RESPONDENT 1; R2 = RESPONDENT 2)

I Do you buy brands?

R1 Yes, I do. I am basically pro-brands. If you buy a branded product, it's a guarantee that the quality is fairly good and the product is reliable. Another reason is you attract a bit of attention if you buy something stylish, and branded products are usually stylish and have a good design. Let's face it, most people buy brands because they want to impress other people. They want to show that they have style and good taste.

I Do you buy brands?

R2 No – well, not actively, anyway. I don't want to give free advertising to companies. I hate all the advertising hype around brands. And I don't want other people to think I'm trying to impress them with lots of logos. And I also get fed up with seeing the same things wherever you go. If you buy a suit from a famous brand, you'll see five people with the same suit that month. It's so boring. Oh, another thing – am I buying the genuine product or an illegal copy? Basically, I want value for money – I won't pay inflated prices for a name, a fancy logo and packaging. However, I do buy brands for my kids – especially sports goods and trainers. It's always Nike, Adidas or Reebok.

CD1 TRACK 2 (I = INTERVIEWER, CC = CHRIS CLEAVER)

I What are the qualities of a really good brand?

CC Strong brands – really, you know, brands that you would say have, er, a real traction in the marketplace, um, will have a number of important qualities. Obviously, the first is, they will have high levels of awareness, so people will know about them and recognise them when they see them, and that might be the physical product, or it might be the visual identity, the design manifestation. Um, but obviously recognition is not enough. What needs to happen also is that people, you know, the target customer or consumer, needs to know a lot about that brand, so a strong brand will also immediately communicate a set of appealing and persuasive ideas, er, and perceptions, that enable the end user, er, you know, the target audience, to know whether or not this is a brand for them, um, or whether it's a brand that they, perhaps, are not attracted to.

CD1 TRACK 3 (CC = CHRIS CLEAVER)

CC Brands are really useful ways of firstly conveying all that information instantly, so – think of any brand you like, any brand that you can imagine, say BMW or British Airways or in any sector, and immediately your head is filled with, er, a raft of important information about what the brand does, but as much as that, what it's like and how it appeals to you and connects with you. And so its function, therefore, is to enable you to choose one thing from another – often in markets where there is very little actual difference between, you know, the product. So a BMW – I'm sure BMW would probably be horrified for me to say this – but, you know, a BMW is a car like an Audi is a car like a Mercedes is a car – they've all got four wheels and an engine and, you know, air conditioning and all that type of thing, but the way people feel about them, because of the information and awareness and perception that they have, enables them to decide whether or not one is better for them or right for them or says the right things about them than another.

CD1 TRACK 4 (I = INTERVIEWER, CC = CHRIS CLEAVER)

I Can you give us an example of a brand you have helped?

CC One I can think of is Nokia. Nokia is, you know, a well-known brand, um, it's by far the biggest mobile phone manufacturer – I think it has about a third of the market, so it's way bigger than anybody else. It's also been, um, in the market – it was, kind of invented the market in a way, so for many people, particularly people of my generation, Nokia equals mobile phones. We've helped them in a couple of important ways. Firstly, um, in a market that's changed and a brand that's expanded hugely in terms of what it offers, we helped them with, er, the question of what is it that Nokia is about, and how does it relate to its customers, its broad range of customers, in ways in which its competitors don't. So to give it that, um, element of choice, you know, so why I should choose a Nokia over a Motorola, um, in addition to what it looks like and what it does. So, what the brand is about – um, so that on what you might call technically the master brand.

And we've also helped them with, um, developing certain parts of their offer in order to, um, react to the market and also to keep the brand fresh. So we worked with Nokia on their N series, which is one of their more technological phones, multimedia phones – although they don't like to call them phones any more because they do so much more – um, in order to satisfy, er, the needs that that emerging customer group has, primarily younger consumers who want to be able to do all sorts of things with their phones – or devices. Um, but also, in order to sharpen Nokia's brand image as a technology leader, it was important that it had products in, in those areas.

CD1 TRACK 5 (D = DAVID, J = JOY, N = NATASHA, M = MARIO)

D Joy, we know our client doesn't want to be linked to football any more. It seems the club they sponsor is asking for too much money. And in any case, they're looking for something more exciting, something that'll give their brand a bit more punch. Any ideas?

J Well, there are several possibilities. How about ice hockey? It's an incredibly fast, exciting sport, it's very popular in America and in a lot of European countries.

D OK, that's a possibility. What do you think, Natasha? Would ice hockey be a good choice?

N Mmm, I'm not so sure. It's not really an international sport, is it? Not in the same way as baseball, for example, or ... tennis.

D That's true – baseball's got a lot more international appeal, and it's a sport that's got a good image. I don't know about tennis – I'm not sure it would be suitable. Mario, how do you feel about this?

M In my opinion, motor racing would be perfect for our client. It's fast, exciting, and the TV coverage of Formula One races is excellent. They would get a lot of exposure, it will really strengthen their image.

D That's a great idea, Mario! Why don't we get in touch with Larry Harrington's agency and see if he's interested? Harrington's young, exciting – he'd probably jump at the chance to work with our client. They're a perfect match. But first I must check with our client and make sure they're happy with our choice.

CD1 TRACK 6 (C = CORNELIUS, D = DIANA, R = RUTH, T = TOM)

C OK everyone, we'll be getting a report soon from the consultants we've hired, European Marketing. But let's think a bit about the problems we may face entering the European markets. Diana, what do you think?

D Well, one thing's for sure, we're going to have to do a lot of advertising to establish our brand, and that's going to be expensive. And we may need to adapt a lot of our luggage for European consumers – that could be very costly, too.

C Yes, but we've allowed for that in our budget. Ruth, what difficulties do you think we'll have?

R Well, we'll need to get the pricing of our products right. But European consumers aren't as price conscious as we are back home, so pricing may not be too much of a problem. I know for a fact people in Europe will pay high prices for luxury goods if they like the design and it gives them status. So, I think we have to develop the Hudson brand as an exclusive 'Made in America' product ... that'll mean high prices and a strong message that our luggage is high quality and great value for money.

C Mmm, that makes sense to me. Tom, what do you think?

T I don't agree at all. I just don't think Ruth's right. I think we should go downmarket, sell at very competitive prices, and aim to achieve high-volume sales. To do that, we'll need to look carefully at our manufacturing costs. So, it's probably time we stopped manufacturing in the US. The costs are just too high.

C Thanks, Tom, that's an interesting point of view. I think we all feel that we need to position Hudson right in European markets. Should we go upmarket or downmarket? That's an important decision we'll have to make.

R/D/T Yeah. True.

C My feeling, too, is we may need to increase the range of our products and stretch our brand, put it on other products – the right products, of course, ones that fit with our brand image. We certainly need some new thinking if we're going to succeed in Europe. And our consultants, European Marketing, will have plenty of advice for us, I've no doubt.

UNIT 2 TRAVEL

CD1 TRACK 7

- 1 What I really don't like is the way airlines treat people on the plane. There are far too many seats on most planes, so there's not enough legroom, and I'm not even particularly tall! I always try and get the seats near the emergency exit for that reason – you get much more room. Also, the poor-quality food and drink you get on airlines annoys me. It's all so processed and packaged, I just can't eat it. I prefer trains!
- 2 I like flying, but I really don't enjoy being at airports. Things like long queues at check-in irritate me. Also, when I have a lot of luggage and there are no baggage trolleys around, it's really inconvenient. What's even more frustrating is when I do find a trolley and then see that the departure board is full of flight delays and cancellations.
- 3 I must be really unlucky because it seems I'm always a victim of lost or delayed luggage. It usually turns up, but never with an apology. I don't like the attitude of the airlines, and I'm sorry, they're all the same. They seem to treat passengers like just another piece of luggage to be moved around the world. They seem to forget that we're people. For example, they overbook seats and just expect people to be able to get the next flight if their flight is full. What I really hate, though, is jet lag. It's a big problem for me, as I travel a lot to the Far East on business.

CD1 TRACK 8

My last overseas business trip was a nightmare from start to finish. First of all, there was a delay on the way to the airport, as there was an accident on the freeway. When I got there, I found the lower level of the airport parking lot was flooded. Next, my carry-on baggage was too big and heavy, so I had to check it in. When we arrived, the subway was closed, and there were no cabs at all. After a long time trying to figure out the schedule and waiting in line for 40 minutes, we finally got a bus downtown and found the hotel. Then there was a problem with our room reservation and, would you believe it, the elevator wasn't working, and our rooms were on the fifth floor.

CD1 TRACK 9 (I = INTERVIEWER, SS = SHOLTO SMITH)

- I What are the main needs of business travellers, and how do your hotels meet them?
- SS A key point would be the location of our hotels, um, good links with um subway underground networks, close to the airport, um, and obviously close to an office that the guest would be working in while they're staying in the hotel. Um, technology is also a key feature, and nowadays it's expected because obviously people have, um, great technology at home and therefore if it's also available in a hotel, that's also, um, a key feature. Um, Internet, a business centre, um, obviously translation services and that kind of facility is also, is paramount, and guests also expect an area where they can, er, go to a gymnasium, they can exercise, um, and also that kind of thing. These would be the key features.

CD1 TRACK 10 (I = INTERVIEWER, SS = SHOLTO SMITH)

- I And how have rising travel costs affected the hotel business?
- SS Er, they have affected business, but it's made the hotels more savvy in that they are being more competitive and looking at ways of adding value to the guests' stay, and that can take in anything from, um, including breakfast, um, on a daily basis, membership to, to the health club, er, including newspapers or possibly looking at, um, you know, transportation to and from the airport, a shuttle service to the local department store or a shuttle service to the offices in which the client, um, works in, um and that kind of, that value-add benefit, as opposed to just directly dropping the rate, which really doesn't benefit either party.

CD1 TRACK 11 (I = INTERVIEWER, SS = SHOLTO SMITH)

- I What future developments do you foresee in the business travel market?
- SS Future developments in the business travel market?

I think ... technology is still a hot topic as is, um, the obviously environmental policies because that really is, um, is obviously still a buzzword, so to speak. We went through, um, healthy eating, we've gone through gymnasiums in hotels and the like, and now really there's such a huge focus on, um, on the likes of the environment – so whether it be water conservation, low-energy lighting in bedrooms, um, and the likes thereof, that, that kind of thing. Um, but obviously it's high-speed Internet, it's television on demand, it's, um, lower-cost telephone calls from the rooms, because obviously people now travel with BlackBerry and with mobile phones, so they're not actually having to use hotel telephone services – um, and these are the ways forward for hotels.

CD1 TRACK 12 (R = RECEPTIONIST, JN = JENNIFER NORTH, CV = CRISTINA VERDI)

- R Good morning, The Fashion House. How can I help you?
 JN This is Jennifer North here. Could you put me through to extension 4891, please?
 R Certainly. Putting you through now.
 CV Hello, Cristina Verdi speaking.
 JN Hello, Cristina. It's Jennifer North from Madison in New York.
 CV Hi, Jennifer, how are things?
 JN Fine, thanks. I'm calling because I'll be in London next week and I'd like to make an appointment to see you. I want to tell you about our new collection.
 CV Great. What day would suit you? I'm fairly free next week, I think.
 JN How about Wednesday? In the afternoon? Could you make it then?
 CV Let me look now. Er, let me check the diary. Yes, that'd be no problem at all. What about two o'clock? Is that OK?
 JN Perfect. Thanks very much. It'll be great to see you again. We'll have plenty to talk about.
 CV That's for sure. See you next week, then.
 JN Right. Bye.
 CV Bye then.

CD1 TRACK 13 (R = RECEPTIONIST, JN = JENNIFER NORTH)

- R Good morning, The Fashion House. How may I help you?
 JN I'd like to speak to Cristina Verdi, extension 4891, please.
 R Thank you. Who's calling, please?
 JN It's Jennifer North from Madison.
 R Thank you. I'm putting you through ... Hello, I'm afraid she's engaged at the moment. Will you hold or can I put you through to her voicemail?
 JN Um, would you be able to take a message for me, please? I'm in a bit of a hurry.
 R Yes, certainly.
 JN The thing is, I should be meeting Ms Verdi at 2 p.m., but something's come up. My plane was delayed, and I've got to reschedule my appointments. If possible, I'd like to meet her tomorrow, preferably in the morning. Could she call me back here at the hotel, please, to confirm?
 R Certainly, what's the number?
 JN It's 020 7855 3814, and I'm in Room 611. I'll be leaving the hotel soon, so if she can't call me back within the next half an hour, I'll call her again this morning. Is that OK?
 R Right, I've got that. I'll make sure she gets the message.
 JN Thanks for your help. Goodbye.
 R Thank you. Goodbye.

UNIT 3 CHANGE

CD1 TRACK 14 (I = INTERVIEWER, AD = ANNE DEERING)

- I How do you advise businesses which are planning to change?
- AD The two important things to take into account when advising businesses is, first of all, help them understand what does success look like – what are they going to change, how are they going to measure that change, and how will they know they've been successful? And I think the second key point is to make sure people are fully engaged in the change, that they feel this is something they are doing for themselves and not something which is being done to them.

CD1 TRACK 15 (I = INTERVIEWER, AD = ANNE DEERING)

- I What are the typical problems that businesses face when they're going through change?
- AD Change is a very difficult process. There are many problems, but I would say the two, perhaps most important, ones are, first of all, what we think of as change fatigue. Organisations have often faced wave after wave of change, programme after programme. Organisations become very cynical about programmes' ability to deliver real change and change that's sustained over time, so it can be very hard to bring people along and create passion, enthusiasm around change when they've seen it again and again.

And the second big area that I see is the ability to get leaders engaged and aligned around the change, so that leadership speaks with one voice, leadership provides a role model for the organisation, and very importantly, helps the organisation stay focused on the change throughout what is sometimes a long and difficult process.

CD1 TRACK 16 (I = INTERVIEWER, AD = ANNE DEERING)

I Can you give us an example of an organisation that you have helped to change?

AD We work with a wide range of organisations around the world. One we helped recently was Nokia and Siemens when they merged their networks business. That was a very exciting change programme at a time of trying to create better value for the organisation. We helped NSN create a future for the organisation, so we had 8,000 people involved around the world in a conversation over 72 hours in which they constructed the values of the future organisation and, following that, then put changes in place that would make that future organisation a reality for them.

CD1 TRACK 17 (P = PETRA, E = EDUARDO, M = MITSUKO, W = WILLIAM)

P Good morning, everyone, I take it you've received the agenda and the minutes of our last meeting. Does anyone have any comments?

E/M/W No/OK.

P Right. The purpose of this meeting is to discuss our smoking policy. As you know, people are complaining that our staff have been smoking just outside the door of the building and leaving cigarette ends everywhere on the pavement. That's not acceptable. Eduardo, you're a smoker, what do you think we should do about it?

E Well, I think we should be able to smoke outside the restaurant, on the balcony. It's big enough for plenty of people to sit there, it's in the open air, and we smokers would be happy. We wouldn't bother to go outside the building.

P Mmm, interesting. How do you feel about that, Mitsuko? Do you agree with Eduardo?

M Not at all. Our policy has always been 'no smoking on company premises'. I think we should keep it that way. Non-smoking staff often go out on the balcony to relax, they don't want to breathe in a lot of filthy smoke. No, it's not at all—

W Come on, Mitsuko, I'm not a smoker, but I do think you should be a little more open-minded, more tolerant ...

P I'm sorry, William. What you say is very interesting, I'm sure, but could you let Mitsuko finish, please? You'll get your turn to give your opinion.

W Sorry for interrupting you, Mitsuko. Please go on.

M I just wanted to say, I don't think we should provide places in the building for people to smoke. It's setting a bad example, especially to younger staff.

P William, what do you want to say?

W I just think we have to try to understand smokers. They're addicted to smoking, they find it very hard to give up, so we should provide them with somewhere to enjoy their habit. Or, if we can't do that, give them a longer break during the morning, say at 11 o'clock, so they can go to the park near here and have a cigarette.

M I think that's a good idea, Petra. It would show smokers that we want to help them, you know, that we're a tolerant, open-minded company.

P Not a bad idea. It's definitely worth considering, too. But I think we should move on now. Can we come back to the smoking issue at our next meeting? I want to get the opinion of staff about our smoking policy. So they'll be getting a questionnaire about it from our HR department ...

OK everyone, thanks for your comments. To sum up, then, on the smoking policy, we'll consider whether we want to give smokers a longer break in the morning. And we'll discuss the matter again at next week's meeting. OK, any other business? ... Right, thanks everyone for your contributions. Have a good lunch.

CD1 TRACK 18 (I = INTERVIEWER, SH = SCOTT HENDERSON)

I First of all, Mr Henderson, what was your main reason for the acquisition?

SH Well, it'll benefit our group in many ways. Obviously, we expect the deal to boost our earnings. It's bound to be good for our bottom line – not immediately, but the year after next, we're hoping ...

I Hold on, it sounds to me, from what you're saying it'll be bad for your bottom line, won't it?

SH Look, like all acquisitions, the reorganisation will involve additional costs, so these will affect earnings in the early stages – all mergers are costly at the beginning.

I Mmm, I suppose there'll be savings as well.

SH What exactly do you mean?

I Well, savings in terms of personnel, staff cuts, redundancies ...

SH I'd rather not comment on that, if you don't mind. We're in the early stages at present, nothing's been decided yet.

I So what are the synergies? What are the main benefits, apart from boosting earnings in the long run?

SH Well, we plan to expand the TV channels, offer more variety and sell more entertainment products. Also, we'll import a lot of Australian films for Asian audiences. I want to make our new group a strong force in Asia.

I I see. Are you worried about the cultural differences between the two organisations?

SH Not really. There'll be some initial problems, no doubt, but our managers have an understanding of Chinese culture, and don't forget, I'm a fluent Mandarin speaker. But of course, the working language in the group will continue to be English.

I Right. Thanks very much, Mr Henderson. I hope your company will be very successful in the future.

SH Thank you.

WORKING ACROSS CULTURES 1: SOCIALISING

CD1 TRACK 19 (AS = ANTONIO SILVA, JW = JAMES WHITFIELD)

AS Hi, I'm Antonio Silva, nice to meet you.

JW Nice to meet you, too. I'm James Whitfield. Call me James.

AS Where are you from, James?

JW I'm from Atlanta, Georgia. How about you?

AS I've come a long way. I'm from Belo Horizonte in Brazil. I'm Sales Manager for an office equipment group, Techko. Maybe you know us?

JW Yeah, I've certainly heard of your company. I work for New Era, in New York. I'm a systems analyst.

AS Right. How is business going for you? Is it a bit tough, like for most people?

JW No, not so far. Actually, our sales were up last quarter, but it's early days, I suppose. To be honest, we're all worried about the future, no doubt about that. How about your company?

AS Things are not too good at all. We've had quite a few redundancies lately. All departments have been told to cut costs this year. It's not going to be easy, but we've got to do it.

JW Mmm, doesn't sound too good.

AS No, but these are difficult times for everyone. How was your journey here? I suppose you came by air, did you?

JW Yeah, it was quite a long flight, a bit turbulent at times, but the food and service were OK, so I'm not complaining. How about your journey?

AS Pretty exhausting. But I stopped over at Los Angeles and did some business there. So I did get a rest before coming here. Are you staying at this hotel?

JW Actually, I'm not. I'm lucky, I'm staying with my daughter. She lives downtown, not far from here, and she insisted I stayed with her. It's fine by me. She's a fantastic cook!

AS Woah, you're lucky. I'm staying in a pretty cheap hotel a few blocks away to cut costs, and I'm not at all happy.

JW How's that?

AS Well, the room's very small, and the hotel doesn't have many facilities. It would be nice if there was a pool or gym, so I could have a workout. I couldn't use their business centre yesterday. Apparently, there was no one to run it. It was really annoying!

JW Maybe you should change your hotel.

AS I don't think I'll bother. The main thing is the conference. If the speakers are good, I can put up with a bit of inconvenience at the hotel.

JW Yeah, you're right. We all want to enjoy the conference and listen to some good speakers.

CD1 TRACK 20

(J = JAMES, K = KLAUS, A = ANTONIO, L = LUDMILA, N = NANCY)

- J Hi, Klaus, please join us, there's plenty of room.
 K Thanks, we'd love to ... I don't think we've met.
 J Let me do the introductions. I'm James Whitfield, I'm from Atlanta, Georgia, and I'm a systems analyst for New Era. This is Antonio Silva from Brazil. He's a sales manager with an office equipment firm.
 A How do you do.
 K Pleased to meet you. I'm Klaus Liebermann, I'm a colleague of James's. I'm the Managing Director of New Era's Frankfurt subsidiary. And this is Ludmila Poigina from St Petersburg. She's a director of an engineering company.
 L How do you do.
 K And this is Nancy Chen from Beijing. She's a senior official in the Chinese Department of Environment.
 N How do you do.
 J So ... have any of you had time to visit the city yet? I suppose you want to explore it a bit.
 N Well, I'd love to, I've never been to Seattle, and I've heard a lot of good things about it. But I just don't have the time. I'm only here for two days, and I want to go to as many talks as possible.
 K That's not much time, but you should try to see a few of the sights here, like the famous Space Needle. It's a real landmark. And if you go to the market area, you can see where the first Starbucks store was located, back in the early 1970s.
 N OK, well, I might try to sneak away for a few hours if possible. What about you, Ludmila, are you going to check out the local area?
 L Actually, I've already done that. I came here early so I could look around a bit. I've seen the Space Needle and visited the civic centre. I was really impressed with the Columbia Centre – it's a massive skyscraper, much bigger than the ones I saw in New York.
 K What about the conference? Anyone special you want to see, Antonio?
 A I'll definitely go to Mark Carlson's talk. He's always worth listening to. I don't know much about the other speakers, though. Can anyone recommend a good speaker?
 L Well, I've registered to go to David Broadus's presentation. He's written a lot of books on information systems. I think he'll be the star of the conference. He's a very stimulating speaker.
 K Yes, I can confirm that. I went to one of his talks in Munich last year, and the questions afterwards went on for over half an hour. He went down really well with the audience because he was obviously so knowledgeable about his topic.
 N Yes, I want to go to his talk, too, if it's not already booked up. Another good speaker is Jerry Chin. He's an expert on management software. He's another speaker who shouldn't be missed.

UNIT 4 ORGANISATION

CD1 TRACK 21

- 1 Stock levels have been low for two weeks now.
- 2 Why do we always have to check with the parent company before making decisions?
- 3 Yes, that's fine. If you could just hold on a minute, I'll need to transfer you to a supervisor.
- 4 We need to deliver this consignment on Friday.
- 5 The production line is operating at full capacity.
- 6 The Board of Directors has fixed the Annual General Meeting for Tuesday the second.
- 7 Can you e-mail head office as soon as possible and find out about the designs for the new window displays?
- 8 I'm afraid all our engineers are out working on repairs at the moment.

CD1 TRACK 22

- 1 Well, in some ways, it's quite a conservative company, so some of the systems are a bit old-fashioned. There's still a lot of paperwork, so I suppose you could say it's very bureaucratic. I seem to spend a lot of time looking in files, both on the computer and in our paper archives.
- 2 Our department seems to be busy all the time. We're always getting enquiries from journalists and dealing with the broadcast media. I guess it's because we have such a high-profile boss. Although the company itself is quite hierarchical, our department is actually very democratic – everyone is an equal member of the team.
- 3 It's a big department, and we deal with a lot of employees. It's everything from recruitment and running training courses through to dealing with retirement. It's quite a progressive company, so everything is open plan – which is a bit difficult if I need to have a private meeting. There are meeting rooms, but they always seem to be busy.

CD1 TRACK 24 (I = INTERVIEWER, RR = RICHARD RAWLINSON)

- I How do you analyse a company's organisation?
 RR Well, we take a fairly broad view of organisation. We start with the formal structure of lines and boxes – who reports to who, what their official responsibilities are. But it's mu- very important to go beyond that and think first about their decision rights – what does the position actually have the authority to decide? Who do they need to consult, who do they need to keep informed, who do they need to have approvals? Third area is information flows. If you want to understand how a company works, you need to know who knows what, so we look at communications, information, the sort of data that is provided and who gets it. And then the final area is the rewards, the performance management – not just who gets bonuses and what they're based on, but how do you get promoted and how do people get rewarded in all the other ways that provide incentives in an organisation?
 We put all those four things together – the formal organisation, the decision rights, the information flows and the incentives – and we call that the 'organisational DNA'. So we put a lot of emphasis on understanding that.

CD1 TRACK 25 (RR = RICHARD RAWLINSON)

- RR If you want to start an analysis, we have a survey tool – it's on a website, orgdna.com, where you can answer just a small number of questions about your organisation and then we compare that to answers from about 40,000 other executives and we can recognise patterns, and that helps us to say that your organisation is like these other organisations, and so we can get some learning from comparable organisations. And we call that the 'orgdna profiler'. It gives you a superficial view and it's a good place to start the conversation. But then we have to go much deeper. And we usually organise both workshops with the executives and probes into particular aspects that seem to be particularly interesting. So, for example, we might take a single major controversial decision and look at how that was actually made, and really you often find that the reality is quite different from the theory.

CD1 TRACK 26 (I = INTERVIEWER, RR = RICHARD RAWLINSON)

- I Can you give us an example of how you've helped a company with its organisation?
 RR I recently did a major piece of work for a very large, global American company that was organised by function. So Manufacturing had responsibility for all the plants around the world, Marketing ran all the brands in every country. It was a very efficient organisation, but it wasn't very good at responding to the local markets, and so they decided that they wanted to move to a geographically based organisation. So we had to figure out, first of all, what were the right geographies – was every country a separate geography or are we going to put some together? What are you going to do for Europe as a whole, as well as what you are going to do for Germany and for Spain? Um, so we did a lot of looking at how the business operated, where products were made, where they were shipped to, how competitors were organised. And we also had to spend a lot of time thinking about whether we needed regional organisations or whether every single business unit would report back to the headquarters, er, in the US.

CD1 TRACK 27 (M = MARIA, A = ALEX)

- M Hello, Alex, great to see you again.
 A Hi, Maria. How are you?
 M Fine, thanks. I haven't seen you for ages. We last met at that trade show in Geneva, didn't we? How is everything going with you?
 A Yes, we did ... er great ... pretty well at the moment, thanks. I'm still in the same department, but I got promoted last year, so I'm now Head of Marketing. I'm in charge of 50 people.
 M Fantastic!
 A How about you? Are you still in sales?
 M Actually, no. I changed my job last year. I'm in finance now. I'm really enjoying it.
 A That's good.

AUDIO SCRIPTS

M Yes, but the big news is, Alex, I finally passed my driving test! It took me three attempts, but I finally did it and now I am going to get a sports car.

A Really? That's great! Well, congratulations!

CD1 TRACK 28 (B = BOB, K = KARIN)

B Hi, my name's Bob Danvers.

K Hi, good to meet you. I'm Karin Schmidt.

B Which part of the group are you working for?

K I've just joined MCB. We provide all the market research. What about you?

B I'm with Clear View.

K I don't know much about Clear View. What sort of projects do you work on?

B Well, we're basically an outsourcing business. We supply companies and organisations with various services, including IT, office equipment, travel and even cleaning services.

K I see. And is it a new company?

B No, we're well established. The company was founded in the mid-1980s, and we've been growing rapidly ever since. It's organised into four divisions. We have over 7,000 employees; we've got our headquarters in London and offices in New York, Cape Town and Sydney – so we're pretty big.

CD1 TRACK 29 (F = FRANK, N = NATHALIE, C = CHRISTOPH)

F Christoph, I'd like you to meet Nathalie. She's joining us from the Italian subsidiary. She'll be with us for the next 12 months.

N Nice to meet you, Christoph.

C It's a pleasure.

F Nathalie speaks fluent Spanish, so she could be very useful when you're dealing with our South American customers. She's also very keen on sailing, so you two should have plenty to talk about.

C Oh, that's interesting. I'm sure you're much better than me – I'm a beginner, really, but I do love it. Let me show you where you'll be working. It's over here. By the way, would you like a coffee?

CD1 TRACK 30 (C = CARL, F = FRANÇOISE, JP = JEAN-PIERRE, P = PAOLO)

C I suppose you've all seen the Vice-President's message on the notice boards. What do you think, Françoise?

F Huh, it's pretty typical, isn't it? It's all about how the company will benefit. What about us? Don't we count?

ALL Yeah/Right/Exactly.

F I mean, why should we leave this beautiful building, on one of most famous avenues in the world? We love it here. The move's not convenient for me at all. If we go to Beauchamp, my husband will have to drive 120 kilometres every day to get to work. He'll soon get tired of doing that. And what about my children's education? Will the schools be any good in Beauchamp? I have no idea. How about you, Jean Pierre?

JP Well, to be honest, it doesn't bother me. I'm really tired of living in Paris. It's so stressful here, everyone rushing around, trying to make money. I wouldn't mind moving to a quieter area. Beauchamp sounds quite nice, and the countryside outside the town is pleasant, I believe. What about you, Paolo? Do you think the move will be good for us?

P I am absolutely against it. It will upset families and cause a lot of problems for some staff. I will have to sell my apartment if we move. I only bought it last year, so I will probably lose a lot of money – I don't think I will get any compensation for that, do you? You don't agree, Jean Pierre, I can see that.

JP Well, you're right, Paolo, it'll cause a lot of problems, there's no doubt about that. But the company will benefit a lot, and that's important, too. In the long run, the move will increase our revenue, make us more competitive and keep us in jobs. That's a good reason for moving, isn't it, Carl? What do you think?

C Maybe, but I feel pretty depressed at the moment. I hope they'll postpone the proposal. There's a lot of bad feeling about it. I tell you one thing, a lot of our best staff will refuse to relocate. They can easily get another job here in Paris, they won't want to move. They've got a really good lifestyle, and they won't want to give it up. The management will get a big shock if the relocation goes ahead.

UNIT 5 ADVERTISING

CD1 TRACK 31 (I = INTERVIEWER, MR = MARCO RIMINI)

I What are the key elements of a really good advertising campaign?

MR When I answer the question of what [s] really makes a good advertising campaign, I always go back to the beginning and ask the question, what is the person who's paying for the campaign trying to achieve? What is that person's objectives, what is it that that person wants to happen as a result of spending money on this advertising campaign? So in order to decide whether it is good or bad, it is first of all most important to understand what it is that the campaign must try and achieve. Some people might say, well that's obvious – to sell more goods, to sell more services, to sell more bottles of Coca-Cola or jeans – and often, of course, it is simply to sell more of a product. But not always. Sometimes it is to change the image of a company. Sometimes it is to change people's views of an issue. Sometimes it is to get people to drink less alcohol, to do up their seat belts, to change the way in which they use energy. So a good or bad advertising campaign depends on what it is there to achieve.

CD1 TRACK 32 (I = INTERVIEWER, MR = MARCO RIMINI)

I Can you take us through the typical planning and launch stages of a campaign?

MR So, when we look at the different stages of a campaign, we tend to start always with the briefing. The first stage is to identify the brief from the client and to agree the brief with the client. It is at this stage that we tend to agree the objectives I referred to earlier – what will make the client happy after this campaign has been aired? The second stage is then to take that brief and articulate it for the people in our organisations who have to make recommendations and have ideas about the campaign itself. At this stage, we brief creative people to come up with ideas and media people to ask, to have ideas about which channels those ideas will be seen in. The third stage will be the presentation of those ideas to the client. There is then some debate ... that debate process can go on for quite a long time until there's agreement. At that point of agreement, we get into the execution phase. The execution phase is where we then produce the creative material and buy the space and the places in the channels of distribution for that material.

CD1 TRACK 33 (I = INTERVIEWER, MR = MARCO RIMINI)

I Can you give us an example of a successful new media campaign?

MR One of the most successful new media campaigns, from one of the clients that uses new media best, is Nike. Nike, of course, have a young audience who are very literate about the new media and therefore live their lives in that media. And so rather than simply use advertising on television to talk to this youthful audience, what Nike does is they start seeding viral campaigns. And viral campaigns are pieces of film or pieces of content which they hope will be picked up by individuals who see it – perhaps on YouTube – and passed on to their friends with comments to say, 'Look at this piece of film. Isn't it fantastic?' Perhaps the most famous piece of Nike viral was Ronaldinho, the footballer, appearing to be able to, er, lob the ball directly onto the goalpost – er, goal bar – and it bouncing back to him, ten times – a piece of outrageous skill which is just about believable, and then the viral campaign actually became about was it real or was it faked? So it was not only an entertaining piece of film, but it generated its own PR, public-relations exercise, it generated its own gossip on the web. The answer was, it was fake.

CD1 TRACK 34

- 1 Could I have your attention, please? Right, good morning, everyone. On behalf of Alpha Advertising, I'd like to welcome you. My name's Marc Hayward, I'm Creative Director. This morning, I'd like to outline the campaign concept we've developed for you. I've divided my presentation into three parts. Firstly, I'll give you the background to the campaign. Secondly, I'll discuss the target markets. Finally, I'll talk you through the media we plan to use. I'd be grateful if you could leave any questions to the end. So, first of all, let me give you some of the background ...
- 2 Right, let's get started. Hi, everyone, I'm Marc Hayward. As you may know, I'm Creative Director of Alpha Advertising. Great to see you all. Anyway, I'm here to tell you about the ideas we've come up with for the ad campaign. My talk is in three parts. I'll start with the background to the campaign, move on to the target markets, and finish with the media we plan to use. If there's anything you're not clear about, feel free to stop me and ask any questions. Right, so, the background ...

CD1 TRACK 35

... and particularly in Germany, where this is very important. Just to give you a specific example: if you look at the next slide, we can see from the chart that the key age group is 18 to 25, but that this will become less, not more, important as the product matures in the market. As I say, this is reflected across all the markets.

Right, that's all I have to say about the target markets. Let's now move on to the final part, and the media we plan to use. We'll start in a month's time with a viral campaign on the Internet to generate interest, of which more later. Then there is the new TV commercial, which I'll be showing you in the form of a storyboard at the end of the presentation. Finally, we intend to use images from the commercial for outdoor advertising on hoardings and public transport. This will be linked to a co-ordinated press campaign, starting in June.

So, to sum up, then, before we go to the storyboard: the key points again are that firstly, the product already has wide appeal, so we're really just developing the brand and trying to keep it fresh. Secondly, that we will need to bear in mind the younger sections of the market for the future; and finally, the key to getting the campaign started is the viral advertising campaign. Thank you very much. Now, are there any questions?

UNIT 6 MONEY

And now the business news ...

There was a further downturn in the economy this month as the recession in the United States and Asia-Pacific region continues. Yesterday was another day of heavy trading on the stock market with big losses in share values. The forecast for the near future is not good, as market confidence remains low.

Paradise Lane, the struggling luxury hotel group, is seeking new investment to try and avoid bankruptcy, following the announcement of disastrous interim results. It currently has a debt of nearly $5 billion. There are rumours of rivals GHN taking a large equity stake in the troubled hotel group.

Phoenix Media announced a 15% increase in pre-tax profits on an annual turnover of $4.5 million. Added to the strong performance in the last quarter, this is likely to result in an increased dividend of over 14 cents per share, well up on last year, which will certainly please shareholders. Following a rise in sales in the emerging markets of ...

CD1 TRACK 37 (I = INTERVIEWER, DM = DARRELL MERCER)

I Could you tell me what your role is as an investment director?

DM The aim of the business is to provide investment solutions for private individuals who have, er, capital that they wish to employ to achieve a certain level of return. Um, my role as the Investment Director is to both design the strategy for the client with the intention of meeting that aim, that return, and also then manage that strategy on an ongoing basis.

CD1 TRACK 38 (I = INTERVIEWER, DM = DARRELL MERCER)

I What are the main areas that you invest in?

DM We invest in a number of different areas ... to try and, as I said earlier, to keep the overall spread of investment right. And they really start from the lowest risk asset, which is cash, and then we introduce other asset classes that have different risk and return profiles. So as one is prepared to take on a bit more risk, then obviously one is going potentially to get some more return. So, moving up the scale of risk we go from cash to fixed-interest securities, where in effect the client will be lending their money to either a government or a company in return for a fixed rate of return, with the view that capital will increase over a period of time. We then look at, um, index-linked – i.e. linked to the rate of inflation – securities. Equities will be the next level of risk – an equity being a stock or a share – where you're buying part of a company, and obviously as the company performs better, the price of that share should increase. We then look at slightly more esoteric or different areas of investment to give some return that's not linked to equity returns ... to share returns ... for instance, commercial property is an area where one can achieve a fairly good income return, but you're investing long term into bricks and mortar – something that you can see ... something that's slightly more safe. We also look at, er, commodities ... so looking at precious metals either gold or platinum. We look at agriculture, which has become an interesting area of development over the last 20 years. And then we have the final asset class we call our alternative investments, and they can be either hedge funds, which invest in lots of different areas, or something that's called absolute return funds, where the manager will invest money across a whole wide range of areas with the view to giving small incremental elements of return over a reasonable period. And as I said earlier, we try and combine those asset classes to get the best level of risk and return.

CD1 TRACK 39

(I = INTERVIEWER, DM = DARRELL MERCER)

I In difficult economic times, what would you suggest are attractive areas for investment?

DM There are a number of attractive areas, and I think I've touched on one earlier with the bond investments. But perhaps I'll develop that a little bit further. A lot really depends on where we are within that economic cycle. If we're at the very bottom of an economic cycle, then the best form of recovery is probably going to be in companies who are going to recover as the economy recovers. So when prices are very low, you can invest in equity of a company where you saw they would benefit from that reduction in interest rates that you've seen. If it's in the early stages of an economic depression, or recession shall we call it, then with interest rates likely to be cut aggressively, then obviously the fixed-income area of the market is perhaps the most appropriate place to be. Another area which I think has traditionally been a very safe haven has been gold, and I think over the last 15 years or so, gold has been through a number of different cycles and in particular, I think, as a recovery play, it will always be perceived as a store of value. At the same time, as the emerging markets keep continuing to grow, there's a lot of interest ... appetite ... for people to invest in gold in terms of their jewellery, as well as wishing to own ... to own that asset. So, I think gold, fixed-income securities and early cycle equities would be my answer.

CD1 TRACK 40

Business in brief

It was a bad day for the London market. Following disappointing results from FedEx in the US and fears of a credit crunch, the FTSE 100 fell 105 points or 1.8 per cent to 5,756.9, while the FTSE 250 fell 189.1 points or 1.9 per cent to 9,534.8.

Only eight blue-chip stocks managed to make gains. The best was Smith & Nephew. Shares in the medical devices group rose 2.9 per cent to $95 1/2p after UBS upgraded the stock to a 'buy' recommendation. S&N was also supported by rumours of a bid approach from a Japanese company.

On the other hand, British Airways, down 5.2 per cent to 225 3/4p, fell even further after Morgan Stanley cut its target to 149p. This was because of worries about increasing fuel prices.

Tate and Lyle, the sugar and sweeteners group, lost 5.2 per cent to 402 1/4p after CityGroup lowered its forecasts because of rising corn prices.

Following recent floods in the US, the cost of corn has risen 25 per cent.

CD1 TRACK 41

So, to summarise, our product is a storage device with a modular design. It's very flexible, very versatile. It can be divided up, added to and shaped to fit any space in a house or apartment. You can put bottles, flowers, magazines, fruit, nuts, lots of other things in it. It's lightweight, durable and very stylish, and made out of a special, recyclable material.

We're looking for an investment of $200,000 from you in return for a stake of 25% in our business. The name of our product is MultiStore.

CD1 TRACK 42 (T1 = TYCOON 1, T2 = TYCOON 2, E1 = ENTREPRENEUR 1, E2 = ENTREPRENEUR 2)

T1 OK, another question I'd like to ask you. Have you taken out a patent for the device?

E1 Yes, we have. The product is fully protected against copying.

T1 Excellent. And what's your profit margin on each 10-module unit?

E1 It's approximately 80%.

T1 Mmm, quite good. And how about your forecasts for the next three years, turnover and profit?

E1 In year one, we forecast a turnover of $150,000 and a profit of approximately $120,000. Year two, turnover of $600,000 and a profit of $480,000. And in year three, a turnover of $3 million and a profit of $2.4 million.

T2 Now I'd like to ask a question. How many of the 10-module units have you sold, and who have you sold them to?

E2 I can answer that question, as I'm the sales person in our team. We've sold about 2,000 units, mainly to major department stores and specialist shops for household goods in New York and Chicago.

T2 OK, thanks for all the information. Now, I'll tell you what I think. I like your product, it's definitely got sales potential, and I'd like to make you an offer. I'll give you the full amount, $200,000, but I'd want a stake of 50% in your business. The market for this sort of product is very competitive, there's a lot of risk involved, and marketing and promoting it could be very expensive. So that's the deal I'm offering you.

AUDIO SCRIPTS

- E1 Mmm ... we'll have to think about that. OK, thank you. How about you? Are you interested as well?
- T1 Yes, I like the product as well, but I also think it'll need a lot of marketing to get established, and you may have to change the packaging. So ... I'll offer you the full amount, $200,000, for a stake of 4.5%.
- E1 OK, so we seem to have two offers on the table. Could I ask each of you, what business expertise you could bring to our business? How much help could you give us, apart from money?
- T1 Well, I have a company which sells household products to the retail trade, and it's very successful. You would be able to use our sales force to build up sales and develop the brand. And I would be very hands-on in developing your product.
- T2 In my case, I have a very good track record investing in start-up businesses like yours. Basically, I invest in people, and I've been impressed with your presentation. I think we could work well together.
- E1 Thanks to both of you. Could we have a break and consider your offer?
- T1&2 By all means/certainly. Take your time..

WORKING ACROSS CULTURES 2: INTERNATIONAL MEETINGS

CD1 TRACK 43

The culture we come from or live in influences what we see, do, believe and say. It affects our expectations and behaviour, and we need to be very aware of it. The simple fact is that what's normal or appropriate for us may seem very strange or even rude to someone from a different culture. I'll look at three of the key areas of culture which may affect communication in international meetings, causing confusion and frustration. Firstly, time: not all cultures or people are ruled by the clock. There are some cultures, it's true, where the feeling is indeed that 'time is money'. They will often have strict approaches to this aspect of meetings, such as starting and finishing times and the duration of discussion. Other cultures, however, have a completely different approach and see the starting time as a guide only and the finishing time as not fixed. Other stages may be surprisingly flexible, and you may find that there is little attempt to stick to the agenda. Secondly, the idea of hierarchy in a culture, and therefore in meetings, can be very significant. By this, we mean the relative levels of importance and seniority which people have in a company. Someone from a very hierarchical culture is likely to feel very uncomfortable saying what they think or criticising the ideas of others, especially if the person being criticised holds a higher position. They are also unlikely to openly disagree or report a problem in front of a boss or manager. Criticising the ideas of a superior could be seen as a loss of face for both people involved.

Another key area to think about is the objective of the meeting. In many cultures, there's an attitude that meetings should have very clear purposes and 'get down to business' pretty quickly ... using a structured, pre-planned agenda is important. In such cases, there's very little in the way of small talk – maybe just a couple of comments about the weather, football, etc. However, other cultures see meetings as the place for relationship building and developing trust, so the meeting may be a lengthy discussion, and actual decisions may often be made outside the meeting. Again, the idea that the purpose of a meeting is to make a decision may be alien to some cultures. It's important to bear this in mind, as it can be quite a surprise if you're not used to it. Finally, some advice on successful international meetings. Clarifying is key in any international meeting. Different cultural assumptions mean that sometimes spoken language, body language, including gestures, and written symbols can be misunderstood. Constant checking and feedback is crucial. At the end of a meeting, it's vital to summarise the main areas of agreement and disagreement and ensure that everyone's happy with them to avoid confusion and frustration later.

Overall, any international meeting requires planning, organisation and thinking about if it's to succeed. We must consider how cultural differences may affect mutual understanding and we should try to predict any areas open to misunderstanding before they happen.

UNIT 7 CULTURES

CD1 TRACK 44 (I = INTERVIEWER, JT = JEFF TOMS)

- I Can you give us some examples of culture shock that people have experienced?
- JT There are many, many examples of culture shock, and, er, many of those really come about because people haven't prepared themselves well enough. So examples of that might be timing, where in some cultures the concept and perception of timekeeping is very different, and I guess the obvious one that people always use is the example of the Middle East. The Middle Eastern clock really revolves around two things really – the prayer times and of course, because they were desert travellers, about the movements of the sun and the moon, er, during periods of the day.

Um, other examples is where, again around time, where, perhaps from a Latin culture's perspective, um, it's about building relationships before you actually get down to, to business. Now very often Western, and particularly American, businesspeople find that very frustrating. For Americans, time is money, and so they'll be very keen to actually ... er, the salesman will be very keen to get out his sales literature and start exalting the virtues of the product he's trying to sell you, er, they'll try to get on with the agenda as quickly as possible, whereas, particularly in Latin cultures and also in people like Chinese cultures, relationship building is very important. They'll want to entertain you for sure, and very often invite you back to their home, and all this before they actually want to sit down and do business with you because, in the Latin culture, they are making judgements about you as an individual, as to, as to whether you're the kind of person that they want to do business with.

CD1 TRACK 45 (I = INTERVIEWER, JT = JEFF TOMS)

- I Are some people better suited for international business than others?
- JT Absolutely – er, what companies still tend to do is select people for international business and business assignments, er, purely based on their skill set. So if you're the best civil engineer or you're the greatest IT consultant in the business, it is often thought that this fully equips you to be the best person to conduct that business internationally. Clearly those skills are very important, but they have to be underpinned by, I think, a number of personal traits that make you a more effective international businessperson. Some of those traits – um, adaptability: you have got to be prepared to adapt the way that you do business or adapt your expectations or your needs, to meet the needs of the culture of the people that you're doing business with – so, adaptability; flexibility is obviously very important. Er, you've got to be prepared to actually change the parameters with which you were intending to do business.

CD1 TRACK 46 (JT = JEFF TOMS)

- JT Very important – and you'll know from this course in communication – um, you've got to be a good listener. Er, you've got to pay more attention than you would when speaking to somebody in your own culture to make sure that you have understood quite clearly what is being said. And one of the things that we always say to people is that, to be very sure that you've actually heard what you think you've heard. There are some steps you can take. It's always a very good idea to get the individual, if you're not clear, to repeat what they've said. It may seem tedious to you, but actually it's very important to make sure that you haven't made mistakes. I think also one of the key features of the successful international businessperson is to be non-judgemental. For instance, if you're coming from an Asian culture, er, to try and do business with, er, a Western culture, er, for certain the way that people do things will be fundamentally different – er, the hierarchy, the structure, the decision-making process, the seniority and the influence of the people you're doing business with – will be fundamentally different. Er, you may not agree, you may not approve of the way that business is done in another culture; but the way that people do business in that culture is as a result of many, many years of, of development and so you have to be accepting, er, that it may be not to your liking and it may be different, but it is not wrong.

CD1 TRACK 47

- 1 Small talk is one way to break the ice when meeting someone for the first time.
- 2 I was thrown in at the deep end when my company sent me to run the Gennan office. I was only given two days' notice to get everything ready.
- 3 We don't see eye to eye with our US parent company about punctuality. We have very different ideas about what being 'on time' means. It's a question of culture.
- 4 I got into hot water with my boss for wearing casual clothes to the meeting with the potential Japanese customers.
- 5 I really put my foot in it when I met our Spanish partner. Because I was nervous, I said 'Who are you?' rather than 'How are you?'.
- 6 I got on like a house on fire with our Polish agent; we like the same things and have the same sense of humour.

- 7 When I visited China for the first time, I was like a fish out of water. Everything was so different, and I couldn't read any of the signs.
 8 My first meeting with our overseas clients was a real eye-opener. I hadn't seen that style of negotiation before.

CD1 TRACK 48

- A So where did you go on holiday, then?
 B Italy.
 A Did you have a good time?
 B Yes. It was OK.
 A And which part of Italy did you go to?
 B Sicily.
 A I've been to Sicily – Taormina. I really enjoyed it. What did you think of it?
 B Nothing special.
 A Oh, right. So ... How's it going at work?
 B We're busy.
 A That's really good, isn't it?
 B I don't know about that.

CD2 TRACK 1

- 1 I'm sorry. I didn't quite catch your name.
 2 I'm really sorry – I'd love to, but I'm afraid I'm going to the theatre on Wednesday night.
 3 Not for me, thanks. I'm not keen on seafood.
 4 I'm sorry, but I really do have to be going. It was really nice talking to you.
 5 Welcome to our headquarters. It's a pleasure to meet you. I'm James Clayton.
 6 Katrina, can I introduce you to Greg? Greg's over from the States. Greg, this is Katrina Siedler, my boss.
 7 Please, let me get this.
 8 Here's to our future success.
 9 I'm very sorry to hear about what happened.
 10 I'm sorry I'm late, the traffic from the airport was terrible.

CD2 TRACK 2

- A Is this your first visit to the region?
 B No, I come here quite a lot, but usually to Hong Kong.
 A Oh really! What do you do?
 B I'm an Account Director for a marketing company.
 A How long have you been there?
 B Nearly five years now.
 A Have you been to Tokyo before?
 B No, this is my first trip.
 A Business or pleasure?
 B Business, I'm afraid.
 A How long have you been here?
 B Six days.
 A And how long are you staying?
 B Until tomorrow evening.
 A Where are you staying?
 B At the Metropolitan Hotel.
 A What's the food like?
 B It's very good, but eating at the Metropolitan can be quite expensive.
 A So, what do you think of Tokyo?
 B I really like it. There's so much to see and do.

CD2 TRACK 3 (R = ROSANA, E = ENRIQUE)

- R So, Enrique, what can you tell me about Germany?
 E Well, I don't think there'll be any language problem for you. Most German businesspeople are pretty fluent in English, and they'll use English with you, as you don't know any German. They're pretty formal in business, so don't be surprised at how they address each other. They tend to use family names, not first names, when they talk to each other.
 R I see. What about when you first meet German managers? How do you greet them?
 E Well, generally they shake hands.
 R OK. How about topics of conversation, say, if I'm asked out for dinner or whatever? What are good topics of conversation in France?
 E Oh, that's easy. French people love talking about food – they're very proud of their cuisine, so you can't go wrong if you introduce that topic into the conversation. The French are like the Spanish and Portuguese, they'll go on for hours talking about local dishes.

- R That's good to hear. I love talking about food, too. But I like food a bit too much, so I'm always worrying about my weight. What about safe topics of conversation in Russia? You've spent quite a lot of time there, haven't you?
 E Yeah, Russians like food, too, so it's a good topic. But you could try asking Russians you meet about the state of the economy. That'll get them going. Most Russians love talking about the economy and the problems they're having. It's a really good subject. And Russian men like to talk about ice hockey – it's a very popular sport there. By the way, plenty of Russians speak English well, so you won't have any problems understanding them. But you may have difficulty reading the name of streets, because they're all in Cyrillic script. It can be very confusing for visitors.
 R Oh, thanks. What about Germany? What do Germans like talking about?
 E If you're with men, just bring up the subject of football. They're as keen on football as we are in Portugal. Germans expect to win any match they play, and they often do, except when they play the Brazilians or the Italians! Yeah, football's a great topic of conversation with men. I'm not sure what subjects German women like talking about.
 R OK, thanks very much. What about gifts? Supposing I'm invited out to dinner, what do I bring with me to give my host?
 E Well, in France, most visitors bring flowers for their hostess – everyone loves to receive them. And in Russia, too, flowers are very acceptable. They'd also be a great gift in Germany.
 R Yeah, flowers are the answer in most countries, I'd say. But what else would be a good gift? Chocolates? Something typical from my country, would they like that ...?

UNIT 8 MONEYCD2 TRACK 4

Well, what usually happens is that an employer will advertise a vacancy or new post – sometimes both inside and outside the company. Then, after they have received all the applications, they will screen them – go through and shortlist the candidates for interview – choosing those who appear to meet the criteria for the job. Next, they will assemble an interview panel, which is perhaps as many as four or five people in some cases, and then call the candidates to interview. Some employers choose to check references at this stage to avoid delays later, while others wait until after the interview when they have chosen one of the candidates. Provided the panel is happy, the employer will make a job offer, and the successful candidate starts work. Often he or she will attend induction sessions or be given a mentor who helps to train new staff.

CD2 TRACK 6 (I = INTERVIEWER, CO = CARYS OWEN)

- I How do you help people to find the right job?
 CO As a specialist recruiter, our role is to assist job seekers in finding the perfect role for them. Er, we do that predominantly via our network of offices globally. Er, candidates will have the opportunity to come in, meet with a Hays consultant, and the Hays consultant will work with them to gain an understanding of what type of role they're looking for, what type of organisation they would like to work for, and really anything else that they feel is appropriate for them finding the right role for them. In addition, we'll also work with them on how they present themselves – your CV, for example. We will work through a CV, perhaps give tips and hints as to how best to present that, so that the candidate has the best possible opportunity of being represented in the right way to the client.
 We also use our Hays.com website, which is a jobseekers' website. Candidates can apply online for roles that we advertise – um, they will also have the opportunity to get advice from that website, as well as to how they should structure their application. There's quite often more information about prospective employer[s] on there so that you can really see, straight from the website, what type of role is best for you.

CD2 TRACK 7 (I = INTERVIEWER, CO = CARYS OWEN)

- I Is there any particular preparation you recommend before a job interview?
 CO Preparation is absolutely key for any job interview. Your Hays consultant can assist you prior to that in getting that interview and presenting your CV, but ultimately, at the end of the day, during that meeting with an employer, it's really down to you. We advise all of our prospective jobseekers to ... certainly look at their appearance. You need to look your best for an interview. The other aspect of preparation which is absolutely key is to research your employer. Most organisations have websites, so we always recommend that people conduct a lot of research into that company's website – anything that's going on, any press clippings, any information that you can use to prove to the employer that you have actually made an effort to research them before attending the interview. From the point of view of the actual vacancy, we would always recommend that you look at the duties within that vacancy and have a think about where in your previous experience you might be able to demonstrate your ability to do that job.

CD2 TRACK 8 (I = INTERVIEWER, CO = CARYS OWEN)

I What recent changes have you noticed in the job market?
CO I think probably the most unique change in the job market, in the – most recently, is the intervention of online recruitment and web-based recruitment and websites. For us as a global business, it means that we can truly act in that way – we can recruit roles in the UK that are based wherever, equally we can recruit roles from India that are based wherever. It also means that the candidate or job seekers do have a huge amount of choice. You can go onto your website at home, sitting at home, and look at roles and jobs that are advertised globally, worldwide, so it's an absolutely unique opportunity for both candidates and employers. Equally, um, in terms of the recruitment market, we have seen in the last years ... few years, a development in the need for interim employees and temporary employees. Lots of organisations now are going through periods of change, and I think it's an accepted fact that organisations will continue to go through change, and quite often, specialist people will need to be brought in on project bases, to undertake specific projects in areas such as IT, human resources ... project management generally will be very sought after.

CD2 TRACK 9 (CT = CINDY TANG, LP = LI PING)

CT Good morning, my name's Cindy Tan. I'm calling about your advertisement in the China Post for a Marketing Assistant. I was wondering if you could give me a little more information.
LP Certainly, what do you need to know?
CT Well, first of all, am I still in time to apply? I only saw the advert today, and the newspaper was two weeks old. So, I was thinking, maybe it's too late ...
LP No, don't worry, you're not too late, but you must hurry because the closing date for application is this Friday, so you haven't got a lot of time.
CT I see, that gives me just a couple of days. Well, I see there's an application form on your website, so I'll complete it right away and e-mail it to you.
LP Good, I look forward to getting it.
CT Just one or two more questions. I'd also like to know when the successful candidate has to start work with you. I mean, if I get the job, will I be able to give my present employer sufficient notice?
LP OK, that's a good question. How much notice would you need to give?
CT Well, I think my contract states that I have to give a month's notice.
LP Oh, that's no problem at all. We wouldn't expect anyone to join us immediately. In fact, if you were offered the job, I believe you'd start after the New Year – that would give you plenty of time.
CT OK, so, just to get this clear, I probably wouldn't have to start working until February, and maybe even later?
LP Exactly.
CT One last question. Could I ask you what the salary is? It wasn't given in the advert.
LP You're right. It would depend on a lot of things: qualifications, experience, personal qualities, that sort of thing.
CT Are you saying you can't give me a figure?
LP That's right. The salary's negotiable. But I can tell you, we pay very competitive salaries. I don't think you'll be disappointed by the starting salary we offer.
CT OK, I think that's everything. Thanks very much for your help.
LP Not at all, and good luck if you get an interview.
CT Thanks very much.

CD2 TRACK 1D (I = INTERVIEWER, SW = SEAN WILDER)

I Could I ask you, Mr Wilder, why you want to leave your present job?

SW OK, well, I really enjoy teaching languages, but I'm 52 now, and I feel I need a new challenge, something to really motivate me. It's not about money – we're very well off as a family – but recently I've felt teaching really wasn't enough, wasn't stretching me. I wasn't going to work with a good feeling inside me, let me put it that way.

I So, basically, you were bored?

SW Exactly.

I OK. Now, what would you say is your main weakness, in terms of this job?

SW Mmm, that's a tricky question. Let me think ... well, I seem to get on well with most people, you know, I'm very easy-going – everyone says so – and someone has to do something really bad to me before I get angry. In fact, I can't remember the last time I got angry. I try to avoid confrontation with people. What's the point? I mean, for example, a lot of people say to me, you seem to have such a happy marriage, you two, you never seem to argue, and I say, well, actually, we never do! I hope that answers your question.

I Well ... er ... perhaps. A final question: why should we offer you the job?

SW Well, I've got a background organising sports, I'm very fit, as you can see, and I think teaching's just like running a health and leisure centre. You need the same skills, to get on well with people, have good communication skills and plenty of common sense. I'll find lots of ways to make money for you and increase the profits of the business. Also, don't forget I have a very good academic background. Yale is one of the best universities in the world, and my Master's in Sports Management is ideal for the job, even if I did get it years ago.

CD2 TRACK 11 (I = INTERVIEWER, PG = PAOLO GONCALVES)

I My first question, Mr Goncalves, is why do you want to leave your present job?
PG Well, my present job's OK, I suppose ... but I think I can do better. Who doesn't? I'm well known in São Paulo because of my movie career, and I think it's time for me to use my image to make more money. Actually, my agent suggested I apply for this job – he thought my background in martial arts would appeal to your organisation.
I OK, thanks. Now, what about your weaknesses? What would you say is a weakness in terms of the job we're offering?
PG Well, I suppose I don't have a lot of educational qualifications ... probably the other candidates have more to offer in that area. But the teachers did try to widen my horizons when I was training to be an actor at RADA in London. I don't have qualifications in business, but it seems to me you need other qualities for the job you are offering, like a strong personality, a charismatic person, with good people skills, and I've certainly got all that.
I Mm-hm. Finally, why should we offer you the job?
PG Offer me the job because I'm famous in Brazil, and that will attract lots of customers for you. And I've got a load of ideas for improving your clubs. I could send you a report if you like, by the end of the week, showing what I would like to do to raise Fast Fitness's profile in São Paulo. I'm a very enterprising man, a risk-taker, and that's what you want at the moment.

CD2 TRACK 12 (I = INTERVIEWER, MG = MARTHA GÓMEZ)

I Could I ask you, Ms Gómez, why do you want to leave your present job?
MG OK, it's a good question. I really enjoy working for Superfit, but it's rather a small centre, and the equipment is mostly out of date. I don't think I'm using all my skills at the moment, and to be honest, I don't get on at all with my boss.
I Oh, what's the problem?
MG Well, for one thing, I don't think he really values the work I do with people suffering from disease. I think he's a bit jealous of me, especially when I won that award. But what really bugs me is that he doesn't appreciate the fact that I manage Superfit most of the time. He's always away visiting the other centres, and then I'm in charge – it's a lot of responsibility, but he never gives me a word of thanks.
I What would you say is your main weakness, in terms of this job?
MG Well ... my friends say, um, I need to be more assertive. I just don't like upsetting people, so I often do what they want, instead of saying 'no'. I suppose I'm a little shy, but I'm becoming more self-confident as I get older. Actually, I went on an assertiveness course a few weeks ago, and it really helped me a lot.
I A final question: why should we offer you the job?
MG Well, I've got lots of energy, and I really believe I can persuade people to have a healthier lifestyle. That's the key, I think, to building up a good fitness centre. Also, I'm a creative person and I will come up with other ideas for serving our local community and bringing more customers into Fast Fitness clubs.

CD2 TRACK 13 (I = INTERVIEWER, SC = SILVIA COMINELLI)

- I First, Ms Cominelli, why do you want to leave your present job?
- SC That's easy to answer. To be honest, I'm not being paid enough for my qualifications and experience. I'm looking for a really big job that is well paid and will enable me to meet a lot of people and challenge me in the years to come.
- I OK. Now, what would you say is your main weakness, in terms of this job?
- SC Main weakness ... I speak my mind, and that can sometimes upset people. I'm not a diplomatic person, but staff and students know where they are with me, and they like that. I don't talk about people behind their back, I say it to their face or not at all.
- I A final question: why should we offer you the job?
- SC Look, let me put my cards on the table. You're looking for someone who'll boost your profits and meet some very tough targets. I can do that for you. I expect a lot from people working with me, I set high standards, and staff have to achieve those standards. That's the bottom line. I believe in rewarding people who do well and getting rid of those who don't. And that's the kind of general manager you need at the moment. So that's why you should offer me the job.

UNIT 9 INTERNATIONAL MARKETSCD2 TRACK 14 (I = INTERVIEWER, IM = IAN MCPHERSON)

- I Perhaps you could summarise for our listeners the points you've made so far, Ian. You started by telling us what free trade is.
- IM Right, I defined it as a situation in which goods come into and out of a country without any controls or taxes. Countries which truly believe in free trade try to liberalise their trade, that's to say, they take away barriers to trade, they remove things which stop people trading freely. They have open borders and few controls of goods at customs.

CD2 TRACK 15 (I = INTERVIEWER, IM = IAN MCPHERSON)

- I OK ... then you gave us several examples of barriers to trade.
- IM Yes, I said that there are two main barriers: tariffs and subsidies. Tariffs are taxes on imported goods, so that the imports cannot compete so well against domestic products. Subsidies are money paid to domestic producers so that they can sell their goods more cheaply than foreign competitors. Tariffs and subsidies are barriers to trade because when people are given a choice, generally they will buy the cheapest product.
- I You mentioned other barriers – less important ones, perhaps.
- IM Uh-huh. I talked about quotas, which limit the quantity of a product which can be imported, and I discussed other restrictions on trade, such as expensive licences for importers, which add greatly to costs; and regulations relating to documents which a company must have to export its goods to certain countries. The documents can be very complicated and difficult to complete, so they slow down trading.

CD2 TRACK 16 (I = INTERVIEWER, IM = IAN MCPHERSON)

- I I asked you if free trade was always a good thing.
- IM And I answered, in principle, yes, it is a good thing, it's beneficial to countries.
- I Why?
- IM Countries which open their markets usually have a policy of deregulation, that's to say, they free their companies to compete in markets, without government control or subsidies. Because of this, consumers in free-trade areas are offered a wider range of high-quality products at lower prices. People in those areas can move to the most productive parts of the economy and get better jobs with higher wages or salaries. OK?
- I So why do so many countries protect their industries and not allow free markets?
- IM I gave three reasons, if you remember. Firstly, some people say, why should we practise free trade if other nations compete unfairly? For example, dumping is fairly common in international trade. When companies dump goods in overseas markets, they sell goods at very low prices, usually for less than it costs the company to produce the goods. Companies can usually only do that when they are heavily subsidised by their governments. Secondly, many people believe that strategic industries must be protected. These are industries that are very important to the economy: steel, power, communications and so on. In the United States, many Americans think that the steel industry should be protected against cheap imports from Brazil and other countries. If the US depends too much on foreign-made steel, they argue, this could be bad in a time of war.

Finally, some say that in developing countries, industries need to be protected until they're strong enough to compete in world markets. This is the 'infant industry' argument: certain industries have to be protected until they can stand on their own feet, as it were. My final point was that, throughout the world, there is a trend towards liberalising trade and removing trade barriers. The most successful economies tend to have open markets, and most of their industries have been deregulated.

CD2 TRACK 17 (NN = NAKO NAKAMURA, LB = LI BAI)

- NN If I order 30,000 silk scarves, what discount will you offer us?
- LB On 30,000, nothing. But if you buy 50,000 scarves, then we'll offer you 10%.
- NN OK, I'll think about that. And tell me, if we placed a very large order, say, er, 80,000 units, would you be able to despatch immediately?
- LB We can normally guarantee to despatch a large order within three weeks. But if you order at a peak time, like just before the Chinese New Year, it will be impossible to deliver that quickly.
- NN I take it your price includes insurance?
- LB Actually, no. Usually, you'd be responsible for that. But if the order was really large, that would be negotiable, I'm sure.
- NN What about payment?
- LB To be honest, we'd prefer cash on delivery, as this is our first contract with you. If you were a regular customer, we would offer you 30 days' credit, maybe even a little more.
- NN That's all right. I quite understand.
- LB Look, how about having some lunch now, and continuing later this afternoon? Then we could meet for an evening meal. I know an excellent restaurant in Wanchai.
- NN Yes, let's continue after lunch. If I had more time, I would love to have dinner with you, but unfortunately my flight for Tokyo leaves at eight tonight, and I need to be at the airport by six.

CD2 TRACK 18 (I = INTERVIEWER, AS = ANDY SIMMONS)

- I How do you train people to be good negotiators?
- AS There are three things that are important in negotiation training. Number one is to create an environment where people can do. Using case studies and the use of video, people are able to see how they behave on video. They can look at what's appropriate and they can look at what is inappropriate. What I mean by that is, where they're effective and where they are ineffective. Using feedback, people are then able to change their behaviour – rather than just telling people about negotiation or reading a book. So the experience is vital. Number two: it's about keeping the learning fresh. Using different vehicles and different formats, whether that be, er, e-learning, watching videos online – or recently podcasts – or whether it be through a series of different activities following on the workshop to keep it live, keep it fresh, and to stop people falling into those old habits. The third thing that's very important indeed is to look at the feedback from the negotiations themselves. And at The Gap Partnership, we use a ROI system – which means 'return on investment'. We measure the effectiveness of those negotiations for many months after the training, and this enables us to tweak and change the training and make it more customised. But it also allows the client to see the effects of that training, to measure it, and that provides them with a degree of investment for the future.

CD2 TRACK 19 (I = INTERVIEWER, AS = ANDY SIMMONS)

- I Do the same techniques work with every type of negotiation?
- AS Yes, this is a good point. Um, there is no one way to negotiate. There are many different ways to negotiate. The common misnomer is that people find one way of negotiating and they don't change. In fact, this concept of appropriateness – that's what we teach – says that there is no one way, there are many different ways, ranging from the very competitive, very high-conflict negotiations that are generally win-lose, all the way through to the very, very co-operative negotiations, which are deemed as win-win. And there's no right or wrong, or there's no good or bad, it's just what's appropriate to the circumstances that you either find yourself in as a negotiator or, better still, the circumstances that you put yourself in, if you're really in charge of that negotiation and if you're really well prepared.

CD2 TRACK 20 (I = INTERVIEWER, AS = ANDY SIMMONS)

- I What makes a really good negotiator?
- AS There are many behaviours that make a good negotiator. And, er, when I say 'good negotiator', it's the word 'appropriate' – appropriate in being able to change – and so the overriding thing is to be versatile, to be adaptable, to be able to change your behaviour according to those circumstances. And the behaviours that are appropriate are everything from being able to manage conflict, be able to, er, manage the pressure in a face-to-face negotiation, right the way through to being able to plan effectively, to be analytical, but at the other end of the spectrum, to also be open-minded and creative, in other words to come up with ideas on how to repackage the negotiation, and to have the self-discipline in being able to communicate that with the right use of language.

And when I say 'the right use of language', er, effective negotiators are able to watch for when there is more scope for negotiation. What I mean by that is, the ability to be able to look out and listen for what we call 'soft exposing give-aways'. These are the small bits of language around proposals that will tell you that your counterpart, the person on the other side of the table, has more negotiation room. And these are words like 'I'm looking for ... roughly ... in the region of ... around about ... I'd like ... I'm hoping for ... currently ... right now ... er, probably'. Er, these are words that negotiators spot to help them understand just how movable the other side is. And so language itself is very important and the control of that language; but also the ability to listen. Because the more information you have, the more powerful you become, because information is power.

CD2TRACK 21 (B1 = BUYER 1, B2 = BUYER 2, S = SUPPLIER)

Extract 1

- B1 OK, let's go over our objectives again. What do we really want from this deal?
- B2 Well, price is the main issue, I'd say. We want Pierlucci to supply us with some top-quality men's wallets, but we don't want to pay the prices listed in his catalogue.
- B1 I agree, they're too high for our market, the wallets would never leave the shelves. So we need to get a substantial discount from him, at least 20%.
- B2 Yeah, we should be able to do that. There's a recession in Italy at the moment – money's tight – so he's not in a strong bargaining position.
- B1 Exactly. But he won't admit that!

Extract 2

- S I have never been to your store in Moscow. Can you tell me a bit about your customers? What sort of leather products do they buy? Are they very price conscious? Will they pay a higher price for really top-quality products? How many men's wallets do you sell each week?

Extract 3

- B1 If you can give us a discount of 25% for our first order, we can accept a later delivery date, say the end of June. But I do understand it won't be easy for you to get your new range of wallets to us by then.
- S Twenty-five per cent? I'm afraid that's far more than we usually offer new customers, even a store like yours, which I know is very prestigious. We could possibly send half your order by that date. Would that help?
- B1 It certainly would, as the peak buying months are July and August. Let's come back to the discount later.

Extract 4

- S How about if we send the first consignment by express delivery? We will probably use UPS or TNT as the carrier, they are very fast and reliable. And we'll send the remaining part of the order by regular airmail – that will take a little longer.
- B2 That's OK, as long as you get the first part of the order to us by the end of June – that's vital.
- S Trust me. I can guarantee delivery by that date.

Extract 5

- S Normally, we only supply our top-of-the-range wallets in two colours, black and brown – most customers ask for those colours. If you wanted other colours ...
- B1 What? You mean the wallets would be even more expensive?
- S Well, we would have to charge a little more, because the quantities we produced in that colour would be small, but we could do it.

Extract 6

- S Great, we agree on prices, discounts, the items you want to buy, delivery and method of payment. I will send you an e-mail confirming what we have agreed, and enclosing a draft invoice.

Extract 7

- S OK, I think we have covered everything. If there are any points we have forgotten, just give me a call.
- B2 Excellent, that was a very good meeting. I'm sure we'll do a lot of business in the future.
- S I hope so. Now, about dinner tonight – what time would be convenient for you?

WORKING ACROSS CULTURES 3: DOING BUSINESS INTERNATIONALLY

CD2TRACK 22

Martin did the right thing when he arrived for the meeting on time. The Japanese value punctuality greatly. He shouldn't have been upset by the number of Japanese staff at the meeting. The Japanese are used to working as a group. But he made a mistake with the business card. When you receive a business card from a Japanese person, you should examine it carefully and then put it on the table in front of you during the meeting.

Martin asked a direct question about exclusivity. Matsumoto, like many Japanese, didn't want to say 'no', so he used an expression that Martin had to interpret. Martin may also have had to interpret Matsumoto's body language. Non-verbal communication is important in understanding Japanese businesspeople.

The Japanese believe in consensus and harmony. They want everyone to support an important decision, so many staff may be involved in decision-making, and the process may take longer than in the Western world. Martin made a mistake when he gave white water lilies as a gift for Matsumoto's wife. White flowers remind the Japanese of death.

CD2TRACK 23 (JF = JOHN FISHER, SS = SVEN SELIG)

- JF So, Sven, how did it go, your trip to São Paulo?
- SS Mmm, not too well. I felt a bit out of my depth while I was there. And I'm not sure I can work with Pedro Oliveira, we're very different.
- JF What happened?
- SS Well, I set up the appointment with Pedro two weeks before and when I got to São Paulo, I confirmed by phone. There was a heavy thunderstorm that day. I arrived on time, but Pedro wasn't there. He turned up over an hour later, said something about traffic delays because of the storm, then shook my hand warmly, grabbed my arm and led me into his office.
- Next thing, he offered me a cup of very strong coffee. I thanked him, but said no, I'd already had two cups of coffee at my hotel. Then he said, 'We're very proud of our coffee here in Brazil.' I wondered if I'd made a mistake to refuse his offer.
- JF Maybe.
- SS Anyway, instead of getting down to business, he called three colleagues into the office. During the next hour, we talked about everything except business – football, the thunderstorm – and they asked me lots of questions about my family, life in Denmark and so on.
- JF I suppose you got a bit frustrated.
- SS Of course! I was impatient to start, maybe I showed it a little. Anyway, it was lunchtime, so we went to a local restaurant. Great food, but no talk of business. So I asked them about the crime rate in Brazil, the Amazon rainforest and what sort of government they had at the moment, but I'm afraid the topics didn't generate much discussion. They just didn't seem to want to talk about those things. But we did have a more lively discussion when we started comparing food in our two countries.
- JF Ah, interesting. Food is always a good topic of conversation when you're abroad.
- SS Yeah. We left the restaurant over two hours later, and then we all went to a business club. We played snooker until about six o'clock. It was very enjoyable, I must admit. As I was leaving to go back to my hotel, Pedro put a hand on my shoulder and said he hoped I'd enjoyed the day.
- JF So nothing happened on the first day?
- SS No! If we're talking about business, it was a wasted day.

CD2TRACK 24 (JF = JOHN FISHER, SS = SVEN SELIG)

- JF Tell me about the second day. Things went better, I hope.
- SS Not really. I was meant to give my presentation at ten in the morning. But his secretary phoned and told me the meeting was put off until two in the afternoon.
- JF That must have been annoying.
- SS It certainly was. Pedro invited quite a few of his colleagues to attend the presentation. That was OK, but they kept on interrupting me during my talk, asking lots of questions – I became very impatient. I suggested they ask their questions when I'd finished. I don't think that went down well because they didn't ask many questions at the end.
- In the meeting afterwards, Pedro didn't stick to the agenda. The government had just announced a new tax policy, and they spent most of the time discussing this and getting quite emotional.

At times, they raised their voices to each other. I was really shocked. It was late in the afternoon when Pedro was ready to talk about the first item on the agenda. But I had to leave, as I'd arranged an appointment with someone at the embassy. I apologised that I had to rush off. Pedro just said to me, 'You know, Sven, meetings in our country can last a long time.' Then he put his arm around my shoulder and said, 'You must come to dinner tomorrow night at my home. My wife is a wonderful cook.'

JF So that was it. Did you enjoy the meal?

SS It was a lovely meal, and they made me very welcome, but I'm not sure I can work with Pedro. He's a nice guy, but our ways of doing business are so different. I felt constantly frustrated during the visit, and after going all that way, I don't feel I accomplished anything.

UNIT 10 ETHICS

| 1 bribery and corruption | 6 tax fraud |

CD2TRACK 26 (DH = DAVID HILLYARD)

DH EarthWatch is an international research and conservation and education organisation, and we have over 100 field research projects around the world. That involves, er, scientists looking at how animals and plants are coping in their natural environment. So all these 100 projects are supported from offices that we have in the US, in the UK, in India, in Melbourne, and in Japan and China. And the purpose of our work is to provide the scientific data about what's happening to animals and plants in the world as climate change and as human population expands and as the environment is degraded. All our field research projects are designed in a way that members of the public, company employees, teachers, youth, young scientists can join our researchers in the field as field assistants and collect real data that is contributing to understanding what is happening.

CD2TRACK 27 (I = INTERVIEWER, DH = DAVID HILLYARD)

- I What role can corporate sponsors play in helping the environment?
- DH Companies have a huge role to play. Er, our global economy is based on the companies operating and producing goods and services that we consume. So, fundamentally, businesses need to change the way they operate in order to help and reduce the environmental impact of their operations. I think many companies are able to set leading examples, to innovate and to find new solutions to the environmental problems we have. So, erm, most people in the world work for a company, so the opportunity for companies to educate and engage their employees and get their employees inspired and motivated to do something in their own communities or in their workplace with respect to the environment is a big opportunity that ... that EarthWatch certainly believes in, and EarthWatch works with many companies to try and promote environmental change and promote good practice so that those leading companies can then influence other companies to follow, and also influence government.

CD2TRACK 28 (DH = DAVID HILLYARD)

DH So, for example, we work with HSBC, the global bank, on a climate partnership which is in collaboration with other key conservation organisations such as WWF and the Smithsonian Institute, and through that, we're providing a learning opportunity online for every single HSBC employee around the world and also setting up five climate-change research centres around the world, and 2,000 HSBC employees over the next five years will join our field researchers in India, in Brazil, in the US, in the UK and in China to carry out data collection to understand how forests are, are coping with climate change and what is happening and what, what, how animals and plants are being affected.

So that's a very important programme, and it's a very important way of getting company employees involved in our work, understanding what the issues are and then taking that back into their workplace and becoming, we call them climate champions, ambassadors for, for environmental change, so that they can then influence their colleagues and also the way that HSBC operates as a business. So that's an example of a very important programme for us, erm, and a demonstration of how a company can, erm, can and should make a difference in terms of these issues.

CD2TRACK 29

- A There have been a number of cases of résumé dishonesty in the papers recently.
- B That's right. And unfortunately, it happened to a really good friend of mine.
- A Oh? What happened?
- B Well, she got a really good job – Head of Sales at a prestigious company. She was over the moon. Everything was going really well. She was getting on with all her sales staff, she was receiving strong performance reviews and she was exceeding all her sales targets. She was getting a bit of a reputation as a rising star. Then suddenly, after four years in the job, her company fired her.
- A Was it her CV?
- B Yeah. She had lied on it. She had claimed she had a Master's degree – and she had also made up a fictitious previous employer.
- A Do you know why she had done it?
- B She said she had felt desperate because she had been unemployed for a few months.
- A And how did they find out?
- B An HR initiative. It required employees to show all college transcripts. And they found out she didn't have a Master's degree after all. It wasn't the lack of the degree that cost her her job. It was her dishonesty. Since then, I've advised everyone to be honest on their CV.

CD2TRACK 30

- A OK, let's talk about Tom. We all know he's become a real problem. And we can't turn a blind eye to what's going on any longer. He's sending in sales reports saying he's met various customers and we find out it's not true. And worst of all, he's putting in expense claims we know to be false. He claims he's had meals with customers, and then we find out they haven't met him for ages. These are serious matters, we can't ignore them. But also he's upsetting the other people in the department. They say he's really rude and unco-operative, a real nightmare to work with.
- B Yeah, the problem is, he's a really good salesman – in fact, he was our top salesman last year – but I agree he needs tighter control. He isn't behaving professionally and he's not being a good team player. We can't let it go on.
- A Exactly. But what are we going to do about it? It won't be easy; he's a really difficult character. Incredibly independent ... he hates rules and regulations.
- B I'd say there are two ways we could deal with this. We could have a chat with him about his sales reports. Also we could mention that we're checking all expense claims very carefully in the future. If we do that, he may come to his senses and start behaving professionally. Or we could take a strong approach. Tell him if he doesn't change his ways, we'll be sending him a warning letter, and that could lead to him being dismissed. What do you think?
- A Mmm, both those options have advantages. But if we just have a friendly chat with him, he may not take it seriously. To be honest, I doubt whether he'll change much with that approach. But if we take a firm approach, there's a risk he may get upset and look for another job. We don't want that either.
- B No, we certainly don't want to lose him. OK, let's look at it from another angle. I'm wondering if he has personal problems and they're affecting his work. Why don't we have a friendly talk with him and find out if that's the real problem? He might respond well to that approach.
- A Mmm, maybe you're right. It might be the best way to deal with the problem. One thing's for sure, he's a brilliant salesman and he's making a load of money for us, so we certainly don't want to lose him unless we have to.
- B OK, let's see if we can sort this out. I'll arrange for Tom to meet us. How about next Wednesday? Is that a good time?
- A OK with me – I'm free that morning.

CD2TRACK 31 (I = INGRID, E = ERNESTO)

- I Ernesto, I've just had an interesting conversation with our Head of Research. She's been telling me about a new drug they've done some initial work on. It's for treating a disease which causes blindness.
- E Oh yes, I've heard about that one. I think it's called river blindness or something like that. Millions of Africans are dying from it every year.
- I Most of the people at risk are poor and can't afford expensive medicines to treat the disease. Anyway, it seems that the drug we're working on has had very promising results. It could well provide a cure for the disease.

AUDIO SCRIPTS

- E That's good news. So how much money is needed to put it on the market, and what's the timescale?
- I Well, that's the problem. It'll cost about 100 million dollars to develop the drug, and it'll probably take 10 years or so to bring it to the market.
- E Mmm, that's a lot of money to invest. Is it worth it?
- I Well, that's the question. Should we spend that amount on a drug which will certainly help our image but may not make us much money? I mean, most of the people suffering from the disease probably won't have enough money to pay a realistic price for the drug.
- E I see. So the question is ... should we spend time, money and resources on a drug which may not make us much money? Of course, we'll probably get some financial help in the beginning – a subsidy of some kind – but developing the drug is bound to require a huge investment on our part.
- I Yes, that's the problem. And remember, we're not a charity. The bottom line is, we're in business to make money.
- E Exactly. Anyway, we'll be hearing more about this one, because I see it's the first item on the agenda for next week's management meeting. Let's see what the others have to say about it.

UNIT 11 LEADERSHIP

CD2 TRACK 32 (I = INTERVIEWER, EJ = ELIZABETH JACKSON)

- I What are the qualities of a good business leader?
- EJ I'm going to highlight five, um, areas which I think are important, and I don't think that they are as complicated as many people believe. The first that I would highlight is, erm, a sense of direction. A business leader needs to know where they're planning to go to and how they're planning to get there. The second point I would want to highlight is courage. You need to have the courage to understand, um, when to make the right decision and how to, to push yourself forward – otherwise indecisiveness floods in. Thirdly, communication, um, because without that, you have no ability to take people with you, um, and there's no point at all in plotting a course, arriving there and finding that you've left the troops behind. The next point that I would highlight is respect. The communication with the people that you are, um, working with and the respect that you have, whether those are people within the top level of individuals or indeed other people lower down within the organisation, is very important in order to take people with you and to carry everything through. The last point that I would highlight is emotional intelligence, and that's the sensitivity that you have with the people around you. So that you are able to, um, understand where they are in the organisation, how they behave in the way that they do within the organisation, and yet have the, um, the coldness of head to be able to bring the shutters down if you need to.

CD2 TRACK 33 (I = INTERVIEWER, EJ = ELIZABETH JACKSON)

- I Do you think great business leaders are born or made?
- EJ Well, there's a, um, ... It's a very big question, that. Er, there is plenty of evidence to suggest that there are natural born leaders in life. And yet equally, there is, um, there's a lot of evidence to suggest that one can learn a great number of those skills. What I would say is that, when um, you're competing against a natural born leader, the person who has acquired the skills will, I think, fail every time. And the things that a natural born leader possesses, erm, are things like charisma, intelligence, the ability to influence other people – those are very difficult skills to learn. Um, and I think it's perhaps interesting as an anecdote to say that I believe 20 of the first 23 astronauts in America were all first born. Now, it may be a huge coincidence, but my, um, sense is that it probably isn't a coincidence and there is something about natural born leaders which, as I say, can be learnt from, and people can improve their skill set, but they're unlikely to compete and win against them.

CD2 TRACK 34 (I = INTERVIEWER, EJ = ELIZABETH JACKSON)

- I Which leaders have impressed or influenced you, and why?
- EJ The first of them is, is actually my husband. I've been privileged, um, to share a business life alongside a home life, and my husband is a few years older than me and therefore has paved the way if you like, um, in terms of his business successes. But what I've seen in him is, um, is a tremendous tenacity, and the ability to fight like a cornered rat when he needs to, and that's, that's really rare and very, very powerful when you see it. Um, I also see in him the ability to, um, to strike a chord with people, just by walking in the room. He possesses, um, a level of natural leadership and, and power, if you like. He also has an innate ability for inspired thinking, he works ahead of the pack, um, and I've learnt a lot from that, so I probably am not a natural born leader, but I have learnt an awful lot of skills from the likes of the individuals I've worked with, particularly my husband. And his strategic thinking and being able to work outside the box, I think, has been very, very powerful.

CD2 TRACK 35

Good morning, everyone, thanks for coming to my presentation. I know you're all very busy, so I'll be as brief as possible. OK, then, I'm going to talk about our new range of rackets, which we're selling under the brand name Excel. I'll tell you about the test launch we carried out in Croatia a few weeks ago. I'm going to divide my presentation into four parts. First, I'll give you some background to the launch. After that, I'll tell you how things went during the launch. Next, I'll assess its effectiveness. Finally, I'll outline our future plans for the product. I'll be glad to answer any questions at the end of my talk. Right, let's start with some background about the launch. As you know, it's taken almost two years to develop the Excel range. The rackets are targeted at enthusiastic amateur players, and thanks to some technical innovations, Excel rackets give a player great control over their shots and more power. So, everyone who uses the racket should immediately improve their game. The rackets were thoroughly tested in focus groups, and modifications were made to their design and appearance. OK, everyone? Yes, Manfred, you have a question ... So, that's the background. Right, let's move on to the test launch. How successful was it? Well, in two words, highly successful. We think the racket will be a winner. If you look at the graph, you'll see the racket's actual sales compared with forecast sales. Quite a difference, isn't there? The sales were 20% higher than we predicted – in other words, a really impressive result. Well above all our expectations. The results show that we got the pricing right. And it suggests the Excel range will make a big impact nationwide. To sum up, a very promising test launch. I believe the new range of rackets has tremendous potential in the market. Right, where do we go from here? Obviously, we'll move on to stage two and have a multimedia advertising and marketing campaign. In a few months' time, you'll be visiting our customers and taking a lot of orders, I hope, for the new rackets. Well, that's all I have to say. Thank you for listening. Are there any questions?

UNIT 12 COMPETITION

CD2 TRACK 36 (I = INTERVIEWER, RT = RORY TAYLOR)

- I Can you tell us about the work of the Competition Commission?
- RT The Competition Commission is a public body which carries out investigations into particular mergers and markets in the UK, as well as other matters related to what they call the regulated industries, erm, such as, er, water and energy and the communications sector. One of our most high-profile investigations at the moment is one we're carrying out into the ownership of airports in the United Kingdom. Currently, seven of the UK airports are owned by a company called BAA – that's the British Airports Authority. Um, we've been asked to look into that, their ownership of those airports and whether that ownership structure is in the interests of consumers or whether, er, an injection of greater competition, er, would benefit the users of those airports.

CD2 TRACK 37 (I = INTERVIEWER, RT = RORY TAYLOR)

- I In some business sectors, there may be very few competitors. How can you ensure fairness in such cases?
- RT It's actually a matter of not so many, not so much looking at the number of competitors or providers in a particular market so much as looking at the dynamics of that market. It's equally possible for what you could describe as a concentrated market – one with, say, just three or four major suppliers or providers – um, to be very competitive, but equally so, you can have a market with the same level of concentration, the same number of players, erm, which is relatively static. There's little competition going on between the players, customers aren't switching, and the companies concerned aren't reacting with each other in, in the way that you'd like to in a competitive market.

For example, one of our recent enquiries was into the groceries market in the UK. Um, that is quite a highly concentrated market, in the sense that there are, sort of, four or five major grocery companies in this country, erm, and they control something in the region of 80 per cent of the market. However, um, our-, after in-depth investigation, it was clear that this is a market where these companies are competing actively with each other. Um, customers have a choice and they're exercising that choice and, as a result, the companies concerned are competing with each other, which brings the benefits in terms of, um, lower prices, innovation and greater choice for consumers.

CD2 TRACK 38 (RT = RORY TAYLOR)

RT We could contrast that with another enquiry that we did, completed about two years ago, into what's known as liquid petroleum gas for domestic users. Essentially, this is for customers who are not supplied for energy through pipes – they live in remote areas, and therefore they need the gas, which is also known as propane, propane, delivered to their house and put in a tank. Again this is a market with only four major players in it, concentrated in the same way in nominal terms like the groceries industry, but we found a far more static market. Er, we found that customers were not switching between the companies, the companies were not competing with each other, erm, and consequently we were finding higher prices, less innovation and less choice.

CD2 TRACK 39 (M = MANUFACTURER, A = AGENT)

- M OK, perhaps we could start, as we agreed, by discussing the kind of relationship we want.
- A OK.
- M Usually with a major distributor or agent, we don't offer an exclusive agency agreement, because they don't want it. They like to use and distribute the products of most of the top companies. They make more money that way.
- A Yes, a non-exclusive contract would be perfect for us, too. As you know, we represent many famous brands and will be happy to add your product lines to our list.
- M Right. Now, prices: we like to recommend prices for each overseas market – we advise on minimum and maximum prices for each of our models.
- A No, that's no good for us. We prefer to set the prices for all the products we offer. We know the market conditions far better than you ... we would set the correct prices to maximise profits, of course.
- M OK, it is not really a problem if you prefer it that way – I won't argue with you. Now, the commission: I suggest a rate of 15 per cent on all the revenue you obtain, either directly or indirectly. Is that OK?
- A Fifteen per cent is too low. We want at least 20 per cent. The market is very competitive. We'll have to spend a lot on advertising and promoting your products.
- M Yes, but we could help with this.
- A How much will you pay us?
- M Well, we might go 50:50 up to an agreed limit. We can talk about the exact figures later.
- A I'll have to think about it. We'll talk about the commission later.
- M Let's discuss the length of the contract. Normally, we offer two years, and to be honest, with a new distributor, we prefer a shorter period. Either side can terminate with 60 days' notice.
- A Well, it must be at least three years for it to be profitable for us.
- M Well, we can talk about it later. I suggest we break for lunch now.

CD2 TRACK 40

- 1 A non-exclusive contract would be perfect for us, too.
- 2 No, that's no good for us.
- 3 We know the market conditions far better than you.
- 4 I suggest a rate of 15 per cent on all the revenue you obtain.
- 5 Fifteen per cent is too low. We want at least 20 per cent.
- 6 We could help with this.
- 7 How much will you pay us?
- 8 We'll talk about the commission later.
- 9 To be honest, with a new distributor, we prefer a shorter period.
- 10 It must be at least three years.

WORKING ACROSS CULTURES 4: COMMUNICATION STYLES

CD2 TRACK 41

How close do you like to be when speaking with a business colleague? How much eye contact are you comfortable with? Are you comfortable with long periods of silence? And how do you feel about interruptions? These are some of the questions we will be looking at in today's workshop on communication styles and cultural awareness. My name's Patrick Keane and I'm the Managing Director of our office in Caracas, Venezuela.

So why should you listen to me? Well, I've had 12 overseas postings, including Brazil, Russia, China and India, and I speak four languages. By the end of the workshop today, you'll have a better understanding of communication styles in your own culture and an introduction to those styles in other cultures ... and this is the starting point for learning how to deal with cultural differences.

It's worth bearing in mind that 60 per cent of people in this company get an overseas posting.

Let me tell you briefly what we are going to cover today. I'll get the workshop going with a brief talk. Firstly, I'm going to talk about some ways in which we use verbal communication and I'll look at two areas. Then I'm going to look at non-verbal communication, again looking at two areas. And after that, we'll do some activities looking at communication styles in your own culture.

Let me ask you a question: can you put up your hands if you've already had an overseas posting? Thank you. Now, we know that the majority of you will have an overseas posting at some time in your career. One of the challenges we face when we go into a new cultural environment is the communication style.

I'm going to begin with verbal communication. My first example is silence, and how comfortable people are with silence ... when people don't say anything. East Asian and Arab cultures are generally quite comfortable with silence. However, Anglo-Saxon cultures don't feel happy with long pauses in the conversation.

My second example is the acceptance of interruption between speakers. This is seen differently among different cultures. Generally, we can say that East Asians, Americans and Northern Europeans are not comfortable with interruption. They prefer to have as few interruptions as possible during conversations. Now, I'm not saying that people in these cultures don't interrupt. However, in these cultures, people who interrupt frequently are regarded as rude. But if we look at Southern Europeans and Latin American cultures ... well, they're quite comfortable with interruptions. They even see it as positive engagement. They can see cultures which remain quiet as being rather formal or cold.

Let me move on to non-verbal communication – body language and gestures which can provide challenges for staff not used to working abroad. Again, I have two examples. First, I want to talk about proximity, or how close you stand when talking to people. Now, this really does vary between cultures. There's been some research into this, and apparently East Asian cultures prefer the space between people in conversation to be approximately one metre. However, the Latin cultures of Europe and Latin America ... they prefer less than half a metre. This can cause some strange situations where people from different cultures try to get comfortable during the conversation by moving forwards or backwards. As I said earlier, I'm based in Caracas, Venezuela. In fact, Venezuelans like to talk to each other standing about 12 centimetres apart. And they like to touch each other to show trust, or to show that the other person is what they call simpático. My second example of non-verbal communication is the level of eye contact – how much eye contact is normal and when to break it. Some cultures may feel that the other side is not engaging with them and not showing enough eye contact. Other cultures may feel that they are being stared at. Well, Arab and Latin cultures usually have the most eye contact, while East Asians have the least. North Americans and Northern Europeans are somewhere in the middle. Before we move on to the workshop, I'd like to ask you which cultures you feel you know well.
