Generation Z

Generation Z is a bright example of the people who emerged in times of great globalization and postmodernism. Unlike their ancestors, they are familiar with smartphones long before gaining the ability to walk. What is more, it often happens that a toddler has not even learned to speak, but knows perfectly well how to turn on the computer and start a favourite game. So, generation Z is the children of the Internet and modern technology. Due to this, they did not have a typical childhood «in the yards», and therefore are not team players, they should be taught this.

This generation is characterized by the absolute absence of a clearly defined life position. Unlike all their predecessors, Zs are not motivated by money or any career advancement. Moreover, they are not at all independent and constantly need someone to tell them what they should do. However, they are sufficiently ambitious and cannot be forced into anything. After all, they will never do what they do not want. Even from a young age, they need to listen to their thoughts. They love to learn, quickly remember new things. Large amount of information do not present any difficulties for them.

The vast majority of knowledge they get comes from online resources. Because they do not see the point in school or university, they do not get the basic knowledge and skills. Everything they learn online is extremely situational. Despite this, Zs are remarkable for their incredible multitasking and creativity. They are keen on finding solutions to difficult situations and solving complex problems.

Quite negative features are also in their nature. They are often hysteric, striving for everything to be as they say. They have a pronounced arrogance, selfishness and narcissism if to take only the selfie culture and YouTube vlogging. Though they are empathetic, trying to be carrying to people they even do not know.

Generation Z is travellers. They do not need comfort, work or money. They strive for everything new and unknown. Therefore, they will not care where to spend the night, where to go to even if hitchhiking, and the sense of danger is completely absent. The main thing is the emotions that they will be able to experience.

Quite often, generation Z opposes bad habits, and they are also vegetarians. They usually keep to healthy eating, visit sports centres and act in an eco-friendly manner. They believe in world peace and at the same time strive to solve environmental and social problems by avoiding conflicts.

- 22 What is a special characteristic of generation Z?
- A. They are excellent team players.
 - B. They walk and talk faster than the previous generation.
 - C. They are addicted to the Internet.
 - D. They have no difficulty in using various gadgets since early childhood.
- 23 Everything is true about generation Z EXCEPT:
- A. They are fully independent of adults.
 - B. No one can force them to act against their will.
 - C. They need a mentor to advise how to behave.
 - D. They easily acquire new knowledge.
- 24 How generation Z may be characterized according to paragraph 2?
- A. They are extremely creative and educated at the same time.
 - B. They do not understand the necessity of educational establishments.
 - C. They have strong basic knowledge to solve difficult situations.
 - D. They have problems with dealing with several tasks at the same time.
- 25 Everything is true about Z generation EXCEPT:
- A. They adore visiting unfamiliar places.
 - B. Accommodation does not matter while travelling.
 - C. They are careful and cautious.
 - D. Feelings and memories are the main reason to travel.
- 26 What is the lifestyle of generation Z?
- A. They follow a nutritious diet.
 - B. They all are vegetarians and do not smoke.
 - C. They help to manage a conflict situation.
 - D. They are easygoing and act in a friendly way.

30 In order to pay homage to Murugan, the Hindus pierce themselves during a three-day holiday. Moreover, they do not use special earrings and rings, but nails, hooks and just sharp glands. It all starts with a puncture of the tongue, and then the participants of the holiday are so addicted that they just wrap themselves with different metal objects from head to toe.

31 In Mexico, unlike the Orthodox tradition, the Day of Remembrance of the Dead is celebrated on a broad foot. Relatives of the deceased abundantly decorate the graves with flowers, give the dead relatives entirely earthly gifts, such as music discs, clothing and jewellery. And in the evening they arrange loud parties. The main thing – no sorrow!

32 In Kenya, a young man should wear women's clothing and perform women's duties one month after the wedding. Moreover, he looks after all the children of the relatives and takes care of domestic animals. Then he remembers for a lifetime that being a woman is not so easy!

Which tradition _____?

What a tradition? What a symbol?

27 Talented students at this American university are renowned for their ingenuity. One interesting tradition at MIT is the engraving ring. In 1929, the students designed a ring with individual design, depicting the North American beaver as a symbol of the hard work and practicality of the university graduates. The beaver eventually looked more like a rodent and the ring was called a bronze rat.

28 To celebrate the Ascension, Lincoln College students gather at the tower of the building and drop coins from there to the children waiting at the bottom of the square. This tradition goes far back in the past, in the XV century, but it was not fun then. The coins were thrown hot, and it was thought that those who would be burned would learn the lesson of greed.

29 Another tradition goes back as far as 1851, students burying an ivy escape into the ground on campus as a symbol of a lifelong connection with the university. Freshmen's responsibility is to water all planted ivies on the campus and take care of them. On the graduation day, every brotherhood and sisterhood plants a new plant to continue the tradition.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology

30 Students at this university have been studying the impressive chain of underground tunnels and pipes since their creation in 1881. Neither the insects, nor the rats, nor the illegal entry into the territory have not stop generations of students from the research. They are trying to find a secret entrance to the university library as it is believed that the one who finally does it will become the best student of all times.

31 The unofficial mascot of Emory University is Dooley's laboratory skeleton. He appeared in 1899, when students wrote letters to a university newspaper on his behalf. On campus, Dooley is represented by one of the students, usually wearing a black cape, black top hat, and white gloves, who can appears at various events without warning during a year.

32 This college is considered to be the most prestigious of all Oxford schools. But this does not prevent noble students to continue a bizarre old tradition. Every 100 years, college members with burning torches arrange a procession in which a wooden duck is the core element. According to legend, in 1437 a huge duck flew out of the basement of the university. The next ceremony is scheduled for 2101.

For example, in the summer of 2006, someone Robert Tour filed a lawsuit against a service that accused YouTube of copyright infringement. On March 13, 2007, Viacom filed a lawsuit against Google.
